MORRIS "BEN" NADEL KILLED

WITNESS IN CANTON MURDER CASE FOUND DEAD IN AUTOMOBILE

Believe Companion Is
Dan Pfaff—Nadel
On Bond

CLEVELAND, March 21.—Morris "Ben" Nadel, the man who arranged a "hide-out" for Pat McDermott, following the Don R. Mellett murder at Canton, and a companion, not yet identified, were shot and killed near Willoughby, east of Cleveland, early today by two youthful assailants who escaped.

The two bodies were found in the front seat of Nadel's Lincoln sedan parked in an isolated section of Lost Nation Road. The man identified by Cleveland detectives as Nadel, had been shot sixteen times while the youth with him was struck by eleven bullets. Portions of each man's face had been shot away. Nadel was slumped over the wheel with the other victim leaning against him.

A highway patrol rider of Lake County, discovered the tragedy. The only clue to the identity of the killers was furnished by Marshall James Maloney, of Willoughby, who said two strange youths stopped at a Willoughby all-night restaurant shortly before 2 o'clock this morning. They were nervous and acted in a suspicious manner, Maloney declared.

Nadel, under penitentiary sentence after being convicted of harboring McDermott, who is now serving a life sentence for Mellett's murder, was at liberty under bond of $35,000 pending an appeal. The companion, it was said, resembled Dan Pfaff, also of Cleveland, who testified at Nadel's trial. Several persons who knew Pfaff, were unable to say positively that he was the dead man, however.

OHIO FEDERATION TO MEET IN LIMA

LIMA, O., March 21.—The Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, which will hold its three day convention in the home of Dr. Josephine L. Peirce here beginning April 15, will make "the home" the keynote of the sessions, it was said. The Federation leaders will outline the adequately equipped home from start to finish, tracing its origin and reporting in detail what has been accomplished in the last campaign.

A number of prominent international speakers will address the delegates. Among them are: Judge Florence Allen, State Supreme Court; Dr. F. D. Slutz, of Dayton, O.; Mrs. John F. Sipple, Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Margaret Bayne, of Texas, chairman of American home department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Dr. Gifford, noted Australian lecturer and Dr. Edward A. Steiner, sociologists at Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa.

ACTOR SUICIDES IN LEAP FROM WINDOW

NEW YORK, March 21.—As the result of the news of his mother's death, which came while he was attempting to repair his theatrical fortune, Charlie Falke, 55, known to Broadway as the "burlesque king", is a suicide today. He hurled himself from the third floor window of his hotel into the alley between the Ritz Theater and the hotel.

Falke's body barely missed Frances Goodrich, the "companionate wife" of Hendrik Willem Van Loon, author, and Miriam Hopkins, both of whom were entering the stage door of the theatre. Frank Launing of the Burlesque Club was with Falke at the time of the tragedy. He attempted to grab Falke as he went through the window, but to no avail.

LORAIN HAS SPINAL MENINGITIS SCARE

LORAIN, O., March 21.—Public school and health authorities were making efforts to prevent spread of what has been diagnosed as spinal meningitis, following the mysterious death of two high school youths.

Joseph Vinovich, 14, died last week, and Norbert Smith, 16, died very suddenly late Monday after being ill a day and a half.

Another student, Joseph Parkas, 16, was reported in a critical condition from the same malady.

U. S. REJECTS PROPOSALS

PROBE ALLEGED PARTY PACT

Woman Honored

Dr. Bertha Van Hoesen, of Chicago, enjoys the distinction of being the only woman ever named on the national honor roll of the medical profession issued by the women's bureau of the department of labor at Washington, D. C. Her name has been placed on the 1928 roster in recognition of her achievements in fighting women's ailments.

STILLMANS TO SAIL ON ANNIVERSARY OF SECOND HONEYMOON

Celebrate "Making Up"
Following Separation.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Their "psycho-analytical" reconciliation a 100 per cent success, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman are looking forward with the eagerness of newlyweds to a third honeymoon—a second anniversary of their memorable reconciliation. They depart aboard the Olympic for Europe on April 6.

"We've been getting on splendidly since we 'made up'," said Mrs. Stillman today in her Park Ave. home.

It is just two years ago since Dr. R. F. Baynes, British psychoanalyst, pronounced the weakened marital ties of the Stillmans completely healed. His verdict followed an exhaustive examination and psycho-analytical treatment of each, first, Mrs. Stillman on her own initiative, then the banker, whose submission to "treatment" by the noted scientist was at the earnest request of his wife.

"The analytic experience is not a pleasant one," said Mrs. Stillman. "One discovers things about oneself that are apt to hurt. Dr. Baynes told me to fight—fight back hard. I knew it meant more suffering, but psycho-analysis shows us that suffering in life must be met and dealt with when it arises, not avoided in a cowardly way."

Stillman was more casual in discussing Dr. Baynes' reconciliation remedy, saying:

"Baynes and I just played a lot of golf together and then sat down and talked. And we got everything adjusted."

Dr. Baynes too, coincidentally, is now a guest at the Stillman home for a day or two, beamed upon the apparently happy couple.

REMOVE M'ANDREW AS SCHOOL CHIEF

CHICAGO, March 21.—Technical removal from his post as superintendent of Chicago's schools, was scheduled to bring the trial of William McAndrew to an end today, thus fulfilling a campaign pledge of Mayor William Hale Thompson to oust McAndrew and purge school textbooks of pro-British and anti-American propaganda.

Majority members of the board of education, before whom Superintendent McAndrew went on trial on charges of insubordination and spreading propaganda in the schools, met late yesterday and voted 8 to 3 for a guilty verdict.

EXPECT DEMOCRATS WILL NOT SUPPORT REMOVAL OF MELLON

Split Between Nye And Walsh Is Reported Near

WASHINGTON, March 21.—As a sidelight to its search for the Continental Trading Company's $3,080,000 "slush fund," the senate oil inquiry today centered upon the existence of an alleged agreement between the national treasurer of the Republican and Democratic parties to conceal all campaign contributions in 1923.

This inquiry divided attention with the pending battle in the senate to force the resignation of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury. A four year old feud was seen behind the action of Senator James Couzens (R) of Michigan, in sponsoring a resolution demanding Mellon's resignation.

The fate of the resolution was in some doubt, with its adoption or rejection depending largely on the attitude of Democrats. A strong Democratic-Insurgent coalition could force its adoption under the present political alignments in the senate but administration leaders believed the resolution would not command United Democratic support, thus insuring its defeat.

Mellon was attacked on the ground he concealed for four years his handling of $50,000 of the bonds given the Republican party by Harry F. Sinclair to pay off its 1920 deficit. Couzens also charged Mellon with many irregularities in handling tax matters and with withholding office in defiance of the law. The latter were old charges, which Mellon has weathered successfully in the past.

A new angle to the bond inquiry was being followed meanwhile by a committee investigator, sent to Sullivan, Ind., to investigate the bank accounts of Will H. Hays, former Republican national chairman. The investigator was told to hunt for evidence indicating that Hays had deposited Sinclair bonds in a Sullivan bank in 1923.

The demand that Governor Al Smith be called as a witness to explain whether he ever received campaign contributions from Sinclair meanwhile fell by the wayside. Committee members, led by Senator Thomas J. Walsh (D) of Montana, declared they had no authority to investigate Sinclair's contributions, if any, in a New York gubernatorial campaign. There were indications though that Senator Robinson (R) of Indiana, who made the demand, would keep the subject alive in senatorial debate.

There was talk incidentally of a "split" between Senator Walsh, the "oil prosecutor" and Senator Gerald P. Nye (R) of N. D., youthful chairman of the committee. Walsh obviously criticized Nye in a statement issued late yesterday, deploring premature publicity on the senatorial story told by a mystery witness in Chicago. It has been an open secret that Walsh and Nye have come close to a "break" on numerous occasions in the past, when Nye was dissatisfied with Walsh's method of conducting the inquiry.

HERRICK ANTICIPATED WAR IS REVEALED IN CORRESPONDENCE

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The situation in Europe is regarded as the gravest in history. It is apprehended that civilization is threatened by the demoralization which would follow a general conflagration.

In these ringing words did Ambassador Herrick, in Paris, appeal to President Wilson personally, on July 28, 1914, to stem the mad tide of war then sweeping over Europe from the Balkans.

His message, made public as a part of the American war correspondence released today by the state department, is characterized in diplomatic circles here as the most prophetic and succinct in the entire feverish exchange of telegrams and cables between the world capitals in the dizzy confusion immediately preceding the outbreak of hostilities.

The document makes public for the first time the unabridged story of this government's coming aware of the World War situation, and its late and feeble efforts to stem the onrushing tide of chaos and disaster.

The hazy grasp of the world situation displayed by the American state department is regarded by diplomatic observers here as among the most interesting revelations of the correspondence from the historical viewpoint.

William Jennings Bryan, then secretary of state, is shown to have been vigorously pushing Ambassador Gerard, in Berlin, for a German-American arbitration treaty as late as July 13, 1914—five days before the Austrian declaration of war on Serbia.

Europe began her mad dance of death on her powder stores on June 28.

JAMES PACKARD, 64, PIONEER MAKER OF AUTOMOBILES, DIES

Founder Of Packard Company Had Long Been Sufferer

WARREN, O., March 21.—Funeral services for James W. Packard, 64, pioneer automobile manufacturer, financier and philanthropist who died in Cleveland late Tuesday will be held at the home here at 2:30 p. m. Thursday. Burial will be in Warren Cemetery.

Death followed a long illness. Packard had been taken to Cleveland for treatment, but all efforts of physicians to save his life proved futile. He suffered intense pain during the last few months. Packard first worked in the factory of an electric company in New York, then returning to Warren, his birthplace, organized the Packard Electric Co., in 1890. The company grew rapidly and was moved to Detroit. Packard was president of the corporation until 1903, then chairman of the board, and later a member of the board, until he retired in 1915.

Becoming interested in philanthropy in later years, Packard distributed gifts to many organizations including $1,000,000 to Lehigh University, his alma mater. Packard was an Episcopalian, and held membership in many clubs. He was an honorary life member of the Elks.

He was by many as the author of "Confessions of a Wife," the first "confession" serial, which ran in hundreds of newspapers for years with an ever increasing popularity. For THE GAZETTE, she wrote "My Son's Sweethearts," which readers of this paper voted to be one of the most interesting and enjoyable series they had ever read in this or any other newspaper. The fact that she has written the new story is sufficient guaranty on its face, that readers will be treated to the best in serial stories for the coming weeks.

ARMS PROHIBITION WILL NOT PROHIBIT WAR GIBSON STATES

Further Consideration If Not Necessary
League Told

GENEVA, March 21.—Formal declaration that the United States rejects the universal disarmament proposals of the Soviet government was made here today by Hugh S. Gibson, chairman of the American delegation to the League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission meeting.

Chairman Gibson's announcement which was made at the morning session of the commission, did not take the European powers by surprise. Following Maxim Litvinoff's appeal to the United States delegation to support the Soviet government's program for worldwide disarmament—proposals which the United States rejects," said Mr. Gibson. "Lack of arms will never prevent fighting. The only method to prevent warfare is through the multilateral treaty to outlaw future wars."

This was the first time that a direct appeal had been made to the League of Nations to support Secretary of State Kellogg's proposed treaty to ban all wars. The proposals had been discussed privately, at the recent meeting of the League of Nations council.

CONSCIENCE FUND NOW TOTALS $3,500

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21.—Checks and cash for $50, in small amounts, were received by Senator Borah (R) of Idaho today in the first mail, bringing the total of his "Republican conscience fund" to approximately $3,500.

The fund is being raised by Borah to repay Harry F. Sinclair's $160,000 donation to the Republican presidential campaign fund, made in 1923 to pay off the deficit remaining from the 1920 campaign.

HONOR EDITOR

CLEVELAND, March 21.—All activities of the Cleveland Plain Dealer were to cease during the period from 3 to 3:30 p. m. today while funeral services were being held for Eric C. Hopwood, editor.

Hopwood, who served with the newspaper since 1902 and held the position of editor for almost eight years, died Sunday night from a heart attack.

DOG COMES BACK

BOSTON, March 21.—Mystery today surrounded the arrival home of "Harvard" a big four-year-old German shepherd dog that was last seen in Glendale, Calif., in July, 1927.

The owner, Maurice Hickey, was in a tourist camp at the California city when the dog strayed. Advertisements failed to produce results, and the big thoroughbred was given up for lost. But today Harvard was waiting in front of his master's door when Hickey went out to get the paper.

Croker And Peterson Suffer Small Loss In Spectacular Blaze Wednesday—Flames Spread Rapidly.

POLICE DOG SAVES MASTER'S LIFE

Dilver Belden Owned Two Buildings Destroyed And Damaged—Eavey Loss Is Grocery Stock—Incubator Blamed For Fire

A three-story brick building between Washington and Hill Sts., occupied by the Xenia Hatcheries Co., was in ruins Wednesday following a spectacular early morning fire which razed the building and damaged a brick warehouse and a two-story frame building nearby with a total loss estimated at $95,000.

The building housing the poultry business burned to the ground with a loss placed at $48,000, including building and contents, while two adjoining structures—one owned by The Eavey Co., wholesale grocers, used as a warehouse, and another two-story frame building occupied by Croker and Peterson, poultry dealers, were also damaged.

BELDEN IS OWNER

The brick building leased by the Xenia Hatcheries Company was owned by Dilver Belden, auto club secretary, who estimated his loss at $13,000, half covered by insurance.

The loss sustained by the hatcheries firm, which was conducted on a partnership basis by William Russell Steel and Leland Cramer, will amount to $35,000, according to Cramer's estimate. This is partly covered by insurance of $16,000 to $20,000. Harold Kershaw, Butalia, N. Y., owns an interest in the company.

The entire equipment and contents of the firm, which included two coal oil and two gas-operated incubators, and eight brooders, in addition to 15,000 baby chicks and approximately 2,000 dozen eggs intended for shipment, were consumed in the blaze.

The loss sustained by The Eavey also owned by Belden, fronting on Co. is practically covered by insurance. Belden places the damage to this building at $8,000, while the loss to the warehouse, according to Walter R. Harper, secretary and treasurer of the company, who estimated the firm's damage at about 50 per cent on contents, principally water damage.

The brick building, one-story, 300 feet in length and fifty feet in width, was partly destroyed when a portion of the roof at one end caved in. It is owned by the Eavey Co.

TERRIBLE STORY OF SUBMARINE DOOMED REVEALED BY PROBE

Victims Fought Of Death To Last Examination Shows

CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD, BOSTON, March 21.—Brave men of the ill-starred submarine S-4 died like rats in a trap—some with the memory of their lungs seared by deadly chlorine gas and others by drowning. It was a lingering death for the forty.

An American flag, the banner they had taken oath to defend, and a piece of green curtain cloth clogged a valve, flooding the control room and preventing the men of the submarine from bringing her to the surface, after the crash off Provincetown with the coast guard cutter Paulding.

Naval experts, continuing their probe of the undersea craft in drydock here today, reconstructed the awful picture of the last hours of the submarine men, 102 feet below the surface. One of them, George Pelner, scribbled with a red crayon on a piece of cardboard a last message—"My body to Pelner, 5609 South 19th St., Omaha, Neb."

"SWEETHEARTS," BY IDAH M'GLONE GIBSON STARTS TOMORROW

THE GAZETTE is pleased to announce that Idah McGlone Gibson has written its new serial, "Sweethearts," which starts tomorrow in this paper.

No more capable or interesting newspaper serial writer is contributing to American newspapers at this time and none has built up such a large following. Idah McGlone Gibson is known as the "Dean of newspaper serial writers," because of her long list of successful stories. She is remembered by many as the author of "Confessions of a Wife," the first "confession" serial, which ran in hundreds of newspapers for years with an ever increasing popularity. For THE GAZETTE, she wrote "My Son's Sweethearts," which readers of this paper voted to be one of the most interesting and enjoyable series they had ever read in this or any other newspaper. The fact that she has written the new story is sufficient guaranty on its face, that readers will be treated to the best in serial stories for the coming weeks.

"Sweethearts," is a clean and charming story of modern American life, as interpreted by a woman who has kept in close touch with the heart and home problems of the nation. As the author of the feature which appears in this paper, called "I Have Said in My Heart," Mrs. Gibson has occupied that difficult position of being the advisor on intimate questions to hundreds of readers.

From the wealth of this experience she has drawn plot and characters for the new serial, which will be released in sixty-six chapters of generous length, each illustrated with photographs. You will learn to love Lynda Fenton and sympathize with her because her father, John Fenton, a kindly man, is accused to drink. She will thrill to her experiences with David Kennedy, her friend and confidant, with Ralph Armistead, Emily Andrews, Claire Stanhope, Fred Blague, June Challer, her mother and others of the very real persons who people this charming story. ### ARMS PROHIBITION WILL NOT PROHIBIT WAR GIBSON STATES

Further Consideration Is Not Necessary League Told

GENEVA, March 21.—Formal declaration that the United States rejects the universal disarmament proposals of the Soviet government was made here today by Hugh S. Gibson, chairman of the American delegation to the League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission meeting.

Chairman Gibson's announcement which was made at the morning session of the commission, did not take the European powers by surprise. Following Maxim Litvinoff's appeal to the United States delegation to support the Soviet government's program for worldwide disarmament by land, sea and air within four years, the general opinion was maintained here that the United States would disregard the plea.

"There is no reason to continue the discussion of Delegate Litvinoff's proposals for universal disarmament—proposals which the United States rejects," said Mr. Gibson. "Lack of arms will never prevent fighting. The only method to prevent warfare is through the multilateral treaty to outlaw future wars."

This was the first time that a direct appeal had been made to the League of Nations to support the Secretary of State Kellogg's proposed treaty to ban all wars. The proposals had been discussed privately at the recent meeting of the League of Nations council.

CONSCIENCE FUND NOW TOTALS $3,500

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21.—Checks and cash for $50, in small amounts, were received by Senator Borah (R) of Idaho today in the first mail, bringing the total of his "Republican conscience fund" to approximately $3,500.

The fund is being raised by Borah to repay Harry F. Sinclair's $150,000 donation to the Republican presidential campaign fund, made in 1923 to pay off the deficit remaining from the 1920 campaign.

HONOR EDITOR

CLEVELAND, March 21.—All activities of the Cleveland Plain Dealer were to cease during the period from 3 to 3:30 p. m. today while funeral services were being held for Eric C. Hopwood, editor.

Hopwood, who served with the newspaper since 1902 and held the position of editor for almost eight years, died Sunday night from a heart attack.

DOG COMES BACK

BOSTON, March 21.—Mystery today surrounded the arrival home of "Harvard" a big four-year-old German shepherd dog that was last seen in Glendale, Calif., in July, 1927.

The owner, Maurice Hickey, was in a tourist camp at the California city when the dog strayed. Advertisements failed to produce results, and the big thoroughbred was given up for lost. But today Harvard was waiting in front of his master's door when Hickey went out to get the paper.

THREE SENTENCED

PAINESVILLE, O., March 21.—After pleading guilty to charges of petit larceny in connection with swindling several persons in Western Pennsylvania and Northeastern Ohio through "special delivery" letter frauds, James McCarthy, 33, Seth Shinolt, 30 and Amy McEllwain, 27, today were being taken to Canton and Marysville, O., to start serving ninety day sentences imposed by Judge Martin H. Halter late Tuesday.

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $95,000 FOLLOWING EARLY MORNING FIRE

Crocker And Peterson Suffer Small Loss In Spectacular Blaze Wednesday—James Spreau Rapidly.

POLICE DOG SAVES MASTER'S LIFE

Dilver Belden Owned Two Buildings Destroyed And Damaged—Eavey Loss Is Grocery Stock—Incubator Blamed For Fire

A three-story brick building between Washington and Hill Sts., occupied by the Xenia Hatcheries Co., was in ruins Wednesday following a spectacular early morning fire which razed the building and damaged a brick warehouse and a two-story frame building nearby with a total loss estimated at $95,000.

The building housing the poultry business burned to the ground with a loss placed at $48,000, including building and contents, while two adjoining structures—one owned by The Eavey Co., wholesale grocers, used as a warehouse, and another two-story frame building occupied by Crocker and Peterson, poultry dealers, were also damaged.

BELDEN IS OWNED
The brick building leased by the Xenia Hatcheries Company was owned by Dilver Belden, auto club secretary, who estimated his loss at $13,000, half covered by insurance.

The loss sustained by the hatcheries firm, which was conducted on a partnership basis by William Russell Steel and Leland Cramer, will amount to $35,000, according to Cramer's estimate. This is partly covered by insurance of $16,000 to $20,000. Harold Kershaw, Buffalo, N. Y., owns an interest in the company.

The entire equipment and contents of the firm, which included two coal oil and two gas-operated incubators, and eight brooders, in addition to 15,000 baby chicks and approximately 2,000 dozen eggs intended for shipment, were consumed in the blaze.

The loss sustained by The Eavey also owned by Belden, fronting on Co. is practically covered by insurance. Groceries valued at $90,000, damaged. Belden places the damage to this building at $1,500, fully covered by insurance. Loss to the occupants, the Crocker and Peterson company, who estimated the firm's damage at about 50 per cent on contents, principally water damage. The brick building, one-story, 300 feet in length and fifty feet in width, was partly destroyed when a portion of the roof at one end caved in. It is owned by the Eavey Co.

Fire also spread to a third building in the group, a frame structure

TERRIBLE STORY OF SUBMARINE DOOMED REVEALED BY PROBE

Victims Fought Of Death To Last Examination Shows

CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD, BOSTON, March 21.—Brave men of the ill-fated submarine S-4 died like rats in a trap—some with the membranes of their lungs seared by deadly chlorine gas and others by drowning. It was a lingering death for the forty.

An American flag, the banner they had taken oath to defend, and a piece of green curtain cloth clogged a valve. According to the coroner's report, the men of the submarine after bringing her to the surface, after the crash off Provincetown with the coast guard cutter Paulding.

Naval experts, continuing their probe of the undersea craft in drydock here today, reconstructed the awful picture of the last hours of the submarine men, 102 feet below the surface. One of them, George Pelmar, scribbled with a red crayon on a piece of cardboard a last message—"My body to Pelmar, 5609 South 19th St., Omaha, Neb."

FORGER SWALLOWS OPEN SAFETY PIN

CLEVELAND, March 21.—John Parsimon, of Martins Ferry, was reported in a serious condition in City Hospital here today, with an open safety pin in his stomach, according to physicians.

Parsimon, deputy sheriff's declared, swallowed the pin on a bet of $1 that it would do him no harm. He was being held in jail on charges of uttering a false check when he committed the act.

ADAMS ASKS PROBE

INDIANAPOLIS, March 21.—Alleging that the Indiana political scandal is of federal concern, Thomas H. Adams, crusading Vinson publisher, here today wrote an open letter to United States Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, requesting a congressional investigation of the Hoosier tangle.

DENIES CHARGES

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Wilbur H. Marsh, former Democratic national treasurer, denied today under oath the charge that an agreement existed between the Republican and Democratic treasurers to conceal campaign contributions in 1923. Marsh admitted however, that he did not file a report in 1923 but explained it was not required by law.

Mrs. J. Walker Benigar was hostess to the members of the Advance Club, on Monday afternoon. Roll call responses were, "When I was a child." The topic for discussion was "Home," and well prepared papers were read. Mrs. O. F. Reeves, "Shelter or Evolution of the House"; Mrs. F. W. Ogan, "Furniture Study by Periods"; Mrs. G. R. Bardsill, "Household Art and Decoration, Use and Abuse of Ornament"; Mrs. Ernest Thuma, a vocal solo, "Our Little Home"; Mrs. C. M. Thompson gave a reading, "Home," by Edgar A. Guest. This meeting concluded the six months' study of the club and an adjournment was taken until the first Monday in October.

Mrs. Virginia Smith, of Springfield, is spending some time with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Johnson.

Mrs. J. H. Turner opened her home to receive the members of the Caesar Creek Baptist Missionary Society Friday afternoon. Mrs. T. A. Spahr presided and also had charge of the program. Mrs. T. A. Mendall led the devotion, Mrs. Alice Turner reading the Scripture lesson. Miss Della McCann gave a reading entitled "An Odd Case"; Mrs. T. A. Spahr, a reading, "Jesus and the Children." The program was followed by the annual election of officers. Those who will serve during 1928-29 are: president, Mrs. T. A. Spahr; vice president, Miss Huldah Turner; secretary, Miss Della McCann; treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Turner. The hostess was assisted in serving a delicious refreshment course by her daughter, Mrs. Effie Reynolds. Eleven members and one visitor were present.

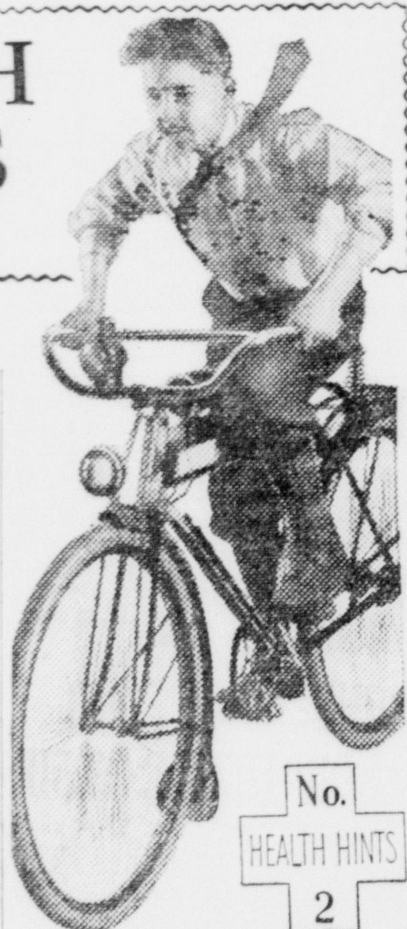

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Turner, of Dunkirk, Ind., are out at their farm, southwest of Jamestown. Mr. Turner is leasing his farm to another tenant, Mr. Chester Browder, who has been residing north of Jamestown on the Dodd farm.

On Thursday evening the members of the Jamestown First Baptist Church held a reception for their new pastor, the Rev. Arthur Campbell, at the church. The congregation of the Pleasant Valley Baptist Church united with them, as the Rev. Mr. Campbell will serve both of these churches. The ministers, the Revs. L. L. Gray and H. S. Snyder conducted the devotional service preceding the social affair. The evening was spent in an informal manner, the Rev. Mr. Campbell and his mother being introduced to the members and others present. Later refreshments were served, the menu consisting of sandwiches, salads, pickles, pie, cake and coffee. # HEALTH HINTS For Parents

Here's a way to make the most delicate boy hale and hearty, and "hard as nails." A way to build his body, and put on weight. Heed this hint, and no boy or girl of yours need ever take another cathartic! Most ailments of children begin with being bilious; and the trouble then and there, with a spoonful of California Fig Syrup. Nothing stronger, nothing else. The bowels will do their duty without using force! If your children have already contracted the laxative habit, fig syrup will wean them away from it.

California Fig Syrup is a purely vegetable product. It will do any child a world of good; it is, in fact, a very wonderful conditioner for children or adults. Its rich, fruity flavor is so delicious, it's no hardship to take! Nor can it harm even an infant! Only one caution: be sure to get the genuine California Fig Syrup; don't neglect to say "California." It isn't expensive—sixty cents for a generous bottle at all dealers.

U. at Columbus and Ben Benson, of Piqua, a fellow student of Granville. On Saturday evening Mrs. Thuma entertained with a party for them. Eighteen guests were present and a most delightful social evening was enjoyed. Several out-of-town guests were among the number. The hostess served a delicious refreshment course.

A fitting program was rendered by the P. T. A. Friday afternoon. After the opening exercises, music was furnished. Miss Margaret Frazier gave a piano solo. The male quartette of the High School Glee Club gave a selection. Miss Martha Ann Baughn, a violin solo, with Mrs. C. T. Walker at the piano. The remainder of the time was given over for the address of Mrs. Wittenmeyer, county public health nurse. In an interesting manner she outlined the duties of her profession and gave in detail the benefits and helpfulness resulting from her work. She stressed the importance of a periodical rigid examination of the school pupils, however, here manifested duties in planning her work for the present. She would be unable to visit the Jamestown schools during this term she said, but hopes to do so early in September of next year. Her talk was well received.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Roberts entertained with a dinner on Sunday. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Baker and son, Ernest; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker and daughter, Palmetta June, of Port William; Mrs. James Hargrave, of Bowersville; Mr. John Roberts and the host and hostess.

Joint Recital Is Pleasing To Large Audience

An enthusiastic audience welcomed Mrs. Marion Wilson Haynie, Columbus pianist, well-known to Xenia music-lovers and Miss June Burdick, soprano of Dayton, who gave a joint recital at the Parish House Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Haynie, whose playing is recognized more and more for her performance which for sheer artistry, has never been excelled here. She played with the ease and poise of the true musician and her manner at all times was pleasing through its simplicity and sincerity. She has a finished technique, a lovely singing tone, and an exquisite delicacy of touch although her hearers were always aware of the power which she held in reserve. She opened the program with the well-known "Carnival" of Schumann which displayed her interpretative powers to excellent advantage. She brought out the varied descriptive bits which compose the "Carnival" in a delightful manner, the

INTERESTING PAPERS READ AT P. T. A. MEET

"It Is Harder Work to be a Mother Than a Daughter," was the subject of one unusually interesting paper presented by Mrs. D. W. Cherry, before Central High School P. T. A., Monday afternoon.

The subject of her second paper was "Dances of the Modern High School." After these splendid papers the organization says "Yes, the high school and home do need the organized help of parents and teachers."

Superintendent H. C. Pendry gave a short talk on "Visual Education" and after his talk the P. T. A. decided to give a motor to operate the motion picture machine at Central. The machine is now operated by hand.

An invitation from Dean Philip C. Nash, Antioch College, for representatives of the organization to attend the educational meeting at the college next Saturday, was read. Anyone wishing to attend is asked to call Mrs. D. W. Cherry, Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, Mrs. Asa Price or Mrs. J. J. Stout.

The president urged the public to attend the orchestra and glee club concert Friday evening, at the school.

Miss Dora Hayward, and Miss Dorothy Devos sang the "P. T. A. Song" by Allan Spurr. Miss Mildred Moon accompanied the singers.

Proceeding the regular business "sing" was held. Mrs. Lee Roy Smith of Orient Hill P. T. A. asked that anyone wishing tickets to the Orient Hill benefit at the Bijou Friday, call her. The proceeds from the show will be used to purchase folding chairs for the school.

Mrs. Charles Weaver, Mrs. E. P. Hamlin, Miss Fannie K. Haynes were elected. Mrs. W. C. Boyce, chairman of the library committee, reported a donation of 184 books and the purchase of several volumes.

NOTE GIVEN IN EXCHANGE FOR ANOTHER'S WIFE IS NOT LEGAL

CHICAGO, March 21. — A man's note given in exchange for a woman's wife is not collectable by law, according to a decision on record here today.

Four years ago, according to testimony in Judge Jacob Hopkins' Court, Otto H. Miller made love to the wife of his neighbor, Mathias Musser.

Later, it was said, Miller repented and gave Musser the following note: "July 5, 1924. I, Otto H. Miller,

HEIRESS BEAUTY TO WED EMIGRE

WILL MARRY DAUGHTER OF RUSSIAN MILLIONAIRE.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 21.—Another echo of the overthrow of the czarist regime by the Bolsheviks with its ensuing adventure and romance has resounded in this far off "Heart of America" city.

One of the most popular girls in Kansas City is becoming the bride of the scion of a titled Russian family, the wedding being scheduled for Manila, Philippine Islands.

She is Miss Jessie Downing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Downing. Her father is several times a millionaire.

Her fiancé is George Leonidovich Artamonoff, soviet exile who fled to the United States to escape the revolutionists who wrecked the financial standing of his titled Russian family. As an electrical engineer, Artamonoff represents an American concern in Manila.

His Father a Count Artamonoff was born on his father's vast estate of Kouvs, near Moscow. His father, Leonid Artamonoff, was the youngest general in the imperial army and bore the title of count. His mother was a sister of General Boris Hartman.

CLAIM SETTLEMENT INVOLVED IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE HERE

Alvin Wakeley, R. R. No. 3, Xenia, in a divorce suit filed in Common Pleas Court against Cora M. Wakeley, 4338 Eastern Ave., Cincinnati, O., requests that his wife be barred of dower interest in a fund of $10,500, received by him from the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. in settlement of a claim for injuries sustained in an accident.

The plaintiff says they were married August 7, 1926 and that no children were born of the union.

Supporting a charge of extreme cruelty, Wakeley alleges that his wife on one occasion pulled a handful of hair out of his head; another time struck him on the head with her shoe, and that once while he was scrubbing up the kitchen floor for her, she kicked him in the side.

While employed as a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, plaintiff claims that he met with an accident October 12, 1926 in which four vertebrae and his left elbow were crushed.

Ever since the accident, he has been unable to work at his usual occupation and will never again be able to perform heavy work, Wakeley claims.

Plaintiff sets forth that he sued the railroad and received a settlement for $10,500 on January 31, 1928.

For a long time before and after he got the money, his wife constantly nagged him about the amount which she was to receive out of the judgment, demanding that he turn over $3,000 in cash to her and that he place the balance in some bank to the credit of their joint banking account, all of which he refused to do, Wakeley complains.

Plaintiff asserts that he wanted to buy a bungalow at the edge of Cincinnati, a proposition which his wife would not consider, so that he found himself unable to live longer with her and they separated February 17, 1928.

Plaintiff asks for a divorce and that his wife be barred from dower rights in the fund he received. However, if the court rules that his wife should not be entirely barred from interest, plaintiff requests that the court fix the amount to be paid her.

NOTE GIVEN IN EXCHANGE FOR ANOTHER'S WIFE IS NOT LEGAL

CHICAGO, March 21. — A man's note given in exchange for a "lease" on the affections of another man's wife, is not collectible by law, according to a decision on record here today.

Four years ago, according to testimony in Judge Jacob Hopkins' Court, Otto H. Miller made love to the wife of his neighbor, Mathias Musser.

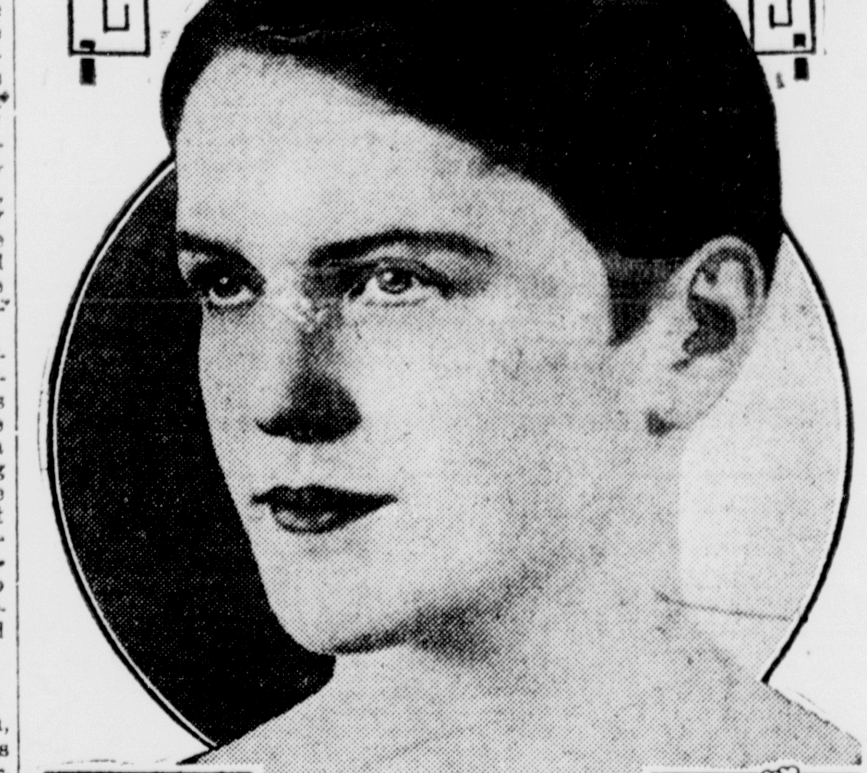

Later, it was said, Miller repented and gave Musser the following note:

"July 5, 1924. I, Otto H. Miller, agree to pay to Mathias Musser, the sum of three thousand dollars ($3,000.00) for damages, heartaches and mental agony by taking his wife away from him."

(Signed) Otto H. Miller. Due Monday 7-24.

Mrs. Musser returned to her husband and was forgiven. When Miller failed to pay the $3,000, Musser brought suit. But the jury ruled against him because there wasn't sufficient "consideration" and that such bargains have no legal standing.

Thad H. Brown, ex-secretary of state and Ohio campaign manager for the presidential candidacy of Herbert C. Hoover, commerce secretary, was advised Tuesday by Dr. Austin M. Patterson, Xenia, professor of chemistry at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, of the existence of what is characterized as an overwhelming Hoover sentiment in the Seventh Congressional District, which includes Greene County.

The message is construed by Hoover managers to mean that the silence of United States Senator S. D. Foss in the Ohio presidential campaign, has caused constituents in his home district to flock to the Hoover band wagon.

"The sentiment seems to cut across party factions. I have heard of no opposition from farmers," Professor Patterson is quoted as reporting to Hoover headquarters.

HELPING BUILD BOULDER DAM

Branding the Boulder Dam project, as proposed in the Swing-Johnson bill in Congress, as a "wide crack in the door for the entry of state socialism," the Ohio Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution against the government entering the power business, but favoring "such measures as may be wise and necessary for the control of floods."

"Ohio is willing to do its share cheerfully in any federal project economically sound and consistent with our traditions," but the resolution points out that:

"The directly benefited region pays about one per cent of the taxes of the United States government. Ohio alone pays six times the taxes of said region. Seven non-benefited states, namely, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, pay 69 per cent of the United States government taxes, or 69 times those of the benefited region."

The claim of proponents of the measure that Boulder Dam would furnish cheap electricity to Los Angeles and that proceeds from its sale would finance the undertaking, is exploded by Samuel S. Wyer, consulting engineer, who says:

"Getting current for nothing at Boulder Dam would make little difference in a Los Angeles electric consumer's bill." He shows that cost of generating electricity by falling water is only 14 per cent of domestic consumer's cost; transmission of power is 12 per cent; and distribution is 74 per cent of delivered power cost.

EDISON'S WARNING TO YOUTHS

"The boy of 20 who does not know what he is to do thereby confesses that he has been wasting his time. He is not interested in any particular work because he has not informed himself about any particular work."

Thomas A. Edison holds this opinion of that class of modern youths who reach manhood without either ambition or training to reach a specific goal in life.

Edison, who himself knew what he wanted to do at 15 and is still doing it with enthusiasm in his 82nd year, so expresses himself in an interview in McClure's.

"There is no excuse whatever for the failure of any young man of 20 to discover something that he would like to do," he declares. "The world is so filled with interesting things to do that the longest human life could not exhaust more than a small fraction of them."

"But to discover what these things are one must inform oneself about them. One must begin to fill one's mind with facts. The more imagination one has the more the facts will mean, the more one will become interested."

"But so many boys waste their time. They waste it because they lack the will to work. They want pleasure, most of them are mad about it. They want money, too, but when they think of that they look for short-cuts. They are not willing to do the hard work necessary to lay the foundations of real success."

The bitter fact, Edison points out, is that the youth who loves frothy pleasures too well is committing himself to a life of hard and distasteful work because he is untrained, while the one who trains himself when young will be able to enjoy the pleasures of later life. "The youth who has not chosen wisely and at 25 is not well on his way in a bad fix," he says.

An old song says that there's no place like home, but even if there was, you probably wouldn't find the young people there.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

SO THAT'S THE REASON

If farmers didn't joy ride so much, if they worked harder and kept up and after their farms as they should they would make a fair profit. Those are hard words but they come from T. F. Hopkins who owns a 2,000 acre wheat farm in Kansas. Says Hopkins:

"Every farmer who spends his time tending to his farm is making a go of it. Most of the unsuccessful ones buy automobiles on the installment plan before they get their crops harvested. Lack of success that these farmers have is due to laziness and shiftlessness."

It is probably true that the average farmer does not work as hard as the average city business man—but he often does a kind of work at the city business man or wouldn't do.

CHEWING GUM VALUES

There are lots of apparently trivial things in this world that have values, only most of us haven't found it out. A Chicago big game hunter, recently back from Africa, says his party took 70 pounds of chewing gum into the jungle.

"What it meant to us can't be estimated," he says. "We got along on half the water ordinarily needed—and good water is hard to get."

SELFISH MOODS

Our indulgence in moods is probably the most selfish thing we do. Just because we didn't sleep well or the toast was burned we cloud the whole atmosphere of our office or lower the pleasant temperature of optimism by our mood. And it is especially indefensible to inflict our tempers and temperaments on our friends.

It isn't your friend's fault that you have an ugly disposition. Is it fair to make him pay for it? Reasonable unselfishness demands that you keep your bad moods to yourself. If you can't do that, keep out of sight. Nobody wants you that way.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

—By—

BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, March 22.

What sort of adults, I wonder, will spring from the present generation of children in New York? With no thought of discarding the Younger Generation, I am yet moved to such speculation by the following incident:

Two little girls, garbed in the eternal primness of infant clothing, ask a fellow passenger in a subway train, how they can go to a certain street uptown. He, a swarthy young man, obliges and one of the girls, who is about ten years old, thanks him politely. A moment later the fellow turned and explained that by changing to a different train, the children might reach their destination more quickly. He expanded on the topic.

The little girl who had first inquired regarded him both suspiciously and coldly. "No," she said, shortly, "we'll stay on this train, thank you." And she turned away haughtily, just as a grown woman might snub an impertinent stranger. The chilly look, coming from under the infant, chin-chin-trimmed bonnet, was nothing, if not grotesque.

Whether he knew it or not, the young man was under suspicion of entertaining evil designs on the children. Not for nothing does the modern child read the tabloids.

Just to bring our own directory of Greenwich Village up to date.

A delicatessen cafeteria, on Sheridan square, is now the recognized gathering place for local talent. Tables are filled during late afternoon, and from 1 to 3 o'clock in the morning.

The proprietor, while recognizing the value of such a clientele, nevertheless keeps a sharp eye on the lookout for deadbeats. A deadbeat is one who occupies a chair and eats nothing. Waiters constantly circulate, and in no uncertain terms ask those who have no dish before them to move on. There are some villagers so talented as to make a ham sandwich last three hours.

On one occasion the proprietor, finding his place filled with deadbeats, earnestly appealed to their better natures, piled up chairs on the tables, turned up the lights, and finally was forced to throw wide the doors and admit the chill winter air before he could persuade the assembled to leave.

One of the more audacious comedies of the season appeared the other evening when "The Bachelor Father," written by Edward Child Carpenter and produced by David Belasco, came to town. Some of the lines were designated by the ladies behind me as "gasps" and as a consequence the piece is naturally slated for a successful run. If there is anything a Manhattan audience delights in, it is sheer audacity in the treatment of the dramatist's favorite topic, sex. What shocks, affronts and offends in a smaller and more conservative city is fondly accepted in New York. I don't mean to say that "The Bachelor Father" is a shocker. It just contains some bold and brazen lines.

WHEN FOLKS MARRY

One often hears a young man in his teens or early twenties boast that he will remain a bachelor. But, ah, how vain are such ambitions! The chances are one out of three, according to cold figures, that he can't avoid marriage even after he is 25. In other words, of nine men single at 20, three are certain to wear the matrimonial yoke before five years have elapsed. The same is true of a young woman. But if a woman is still single at 25, the chances are less than one in five that she will marry before 50; the chances that a man will do so still remain better than one in four. Age has more effect on woman's marriage chances than on a man's. In a general way, every five years added to one's age, between 30 and 50, cuts one's marriage expectancy right in two.

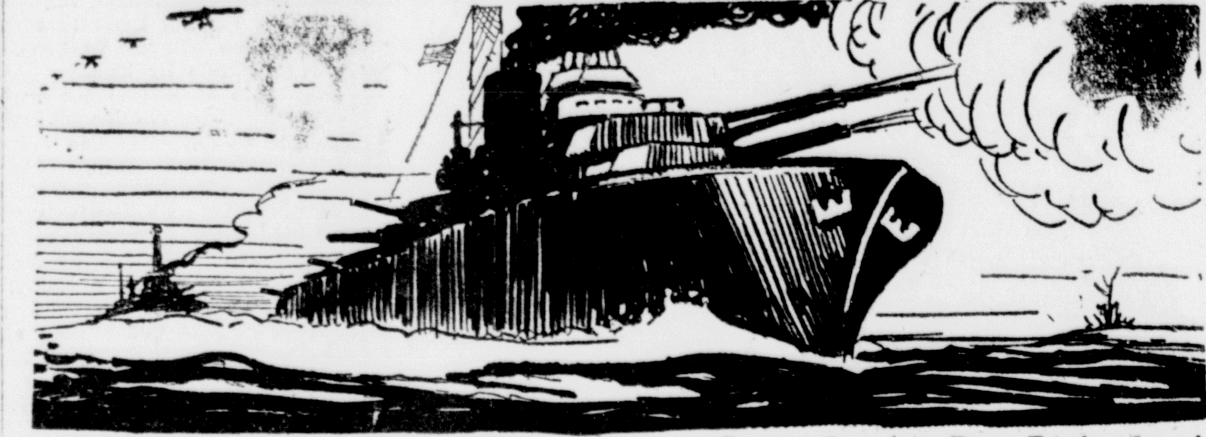

More marriages are between persons without previous matrimonial experience; that is, bachelors and maids. These comprise eight out of ten of all marriages. The next largest groups are widowers with maids, and then widowers with widows, each a little more than five marriages out of every 100. Then come the less likely combination: divorced men and divorced women—less than one such marriage in 300. Twice as many divorced women marry bachelors as marry widowers. Indeed, in whatever combination, widowers are always a little more cagey than bachelors.

From one set of figures I learn that for every 100 weddings, 75 men are older than their brides, and 15 are younger. Of every hundred men married in one year—among a selected population of several thousand—86 were bachelors, 12 were widowers and two divorced. Of the 86 bachelors, 80 picked maids, five got widows and one a divorced woman. The 12 widowers married six maids, five widows, and one divorcee.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BEAUTY DIETS

It has been definitely demonstrated by laboratory experiment, that life can actually be prolonged by proper food, if other contributory conditions are favorable to health and longevity. Personally, I have conducted, literally, hundreds of experiments with food in its relationship to good complexion. I have proved to my own complete satisfaction the fact that good food, scientifically selected in correct proportions, will go a long way toward correcting certain skin conditions, and will benefit all skin conditions.

Diet, of course, is immensely important in modifying or developing the body line. I think fully 40 percent of we moderns select our menus in terms of calories—not at all a bad thing, provided all extremes are avoided.

I am only going to touch upon diet as a beauty aid, for the subject of dietetics is a field in itself.

There are, however, certain dietetic laws which are directly in line with Beauty Building. Certain foods are definitely bad for the complexion, others are definitely good—and these are the rudiments of beauty diet.

Sweets and spices are taboo—to those wise women who value their smooth, clear skins. I have known a woman to "break out" one hour after nibbling at pickles. Spices are heating to the blood. There are very few women who can escape the speedy bad effect of indulging in them. Sweets have the same effect. Personally, I can never drink chocolate or cocoa without knowing that my mirror will rebuke me on the morrow! Orange juice is a blood purifier and a skin clearer. Milk is renowned, and has been for centuries, as a beauty-diet. Leafy vegetables help you to beauty through clean intestines and pure, active circulation. Vegetable liquors are wonderful. An entire day, every month dedicated to a vegetable diet with the vegetable liquors and plenty of clear water will do marvellous things for your health and your beauty.

Celery and apples have definite effects on the kidneys, and the condition of your kidneys will affect the color of your skin. Greasy, yellowish discolored and sallow faces are danger signals! Beets are wonderful for the blood—important to the diet of anemia victims and helpful to all women in bringing natural glow and color to lips and cheeks. All fruit is splendid. An apple a day will not only keep the doctor away, but (especially if you add a squeeze to the fruit quota) it will also help to give you the charm of a white, clear, healthy skin.

For acne and blackheads, both significant of intestinal disorders, the strictest fruit liquid and vegetable diet should be observed. You see, you cannot only eat your way to health, but to beauty too!

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

A CENTRAL REGULATOR OF NUTRITION

In an article in a French magazine, Dr. G. Leven cites to prove that there is a regulator of weight or nutrition connected with the nervous system, and that in underweight or in obesity this regulator is disordered. He says that he has frequently tried to cause a gain in weight in healthy men by having them overeat and take insufficient exercise, but he was not able to do so. He acknowledges that the duration of the experiments was but from 15 to 30 days, because, he says, the over-alimentation produced constipation and gastric disorders. He goes on to give a number of cases which he thinks illustrate his theory of abnormal functioning of this weight regulator. Here are a few of them:

Case 1. A young mother foolishly overate and drank beer with the idea of increasing the quality of her milk. She became very obese. Her pregnancy had thrown her organism into disequilibrium.

Case 2. A man of 47 weighed 352 pounds. He always had a tendency to obesity. He has an ordinary appetite and drinks considerable wine.

Case 3. A woman 33 years of age, always been dyspeptic, but her heart, lungs and other organs were normal. She fell down and injured herself. From then on she began to gain weight and gained 60 pounds in three years.

Now there isn't one of these cases that Dr. Leven cites that gives me any evidence that it was anything but the under-activity and overeating that caused the gain in weight. It is not unusual at all, in fact, it is quite a common experience, to gain weight after an illness or an accident. The reason is quite obvious. The convalescent appetite and the desire to regain the strength, plus the lessened physical activities, get one into the habit of overeating. It does not require any obscure nervous regulator to account for the increased weight!

Few people realize how little food above the normal needs, if it is continued any length of time, will cause a gain in weight. There is apparently a fairly wide zone within which one will stay normal, but going under, or over, that zone, for any length of time will surely result in a reduction, or an increase in weight, respectively.

Dr. Leven doesn't say that a careful count of the calorie intake was made of these patients. How does he know how much they excreted? Their normal appetite? Case No. 2's "ordinary appetite" carries no conviction with me. Especially with the considerable wine taken.

It is impossible to tell how much or how little a person is eating until the calories are counted. One could consume a large meal of the bulky, low-calorie foods and still be eating much less as far as actual fuel and fattening value is concerned, than one who eats a small

MENU HINTS

An easily served luncheon or supper is suggested today. The time of preparation should not be more than 1-2 hours, from the time you start to prepare the vegetables until it is ready to serve. The salad is prepared and the table set while the rest of the meal is cooking, of course.

Today's Recipes.

Baked Luncheon Dish — One pound ham (slice size of baking dish), three or four carrots, cut in wedge shape; one cup peas; two cups string beans, broken up; one or two sliced onions; Two or three potatoes, cubed; One-half head of cabbage, cut in thin sections. In a good sized baking dish arrange layers of above vegetables. Pour in at one side about one cup of water, season with salt and pepper and tuck the slice of ham over the top. Now for the sake of argument, we'll say there is a nerve regulator of weight and when it gets out of order there is a disturbance in the weight. In instances—that a disturbance in the internal secretory gland will cause an increase in the weight. How are we going to get the nerve weight regulator or the internal secretory glands in order again? Simply by the reverse of what brought on the disturbance. In other words, go on a scientific reducing diet. For what do we find, without exception, in these cases? There is over-alimentation; in simpler words, overeating for the needs. Most of the time it may be the chief cause of the disturbance in the "nutrition center," if there is one, or of the glands, and the overweight.

The sooner the overweight person blames his own overeating for his troubles, the sooner he is going to get relief. Those who complain so bitterly of gaining so rapidly on week-ends and vacations, etc., will find that they will lose just as rapidly if they underate for the same extent and for the same period of time that they overate.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Issues! Issues! Issues!

Oh, for political campaign issues! The well-known dog, burying a bone on the marble floor, was not half as busy as all the candidates right now, manufacturing campaign issues.

Issues are this session of congress' principal product. Don't imagine that the presidential candidates are the only ones who have to have 'em. Thirty per cent of the senators, and all the representatives, come up for re-election, too. Every single one of 'em simply must have a good issue.

Gosh! As if there weren't plenty of issues in this country!—to run for congress—or for president, for that matter.

Tut! You miss the point. Those are REAL issues. A candidate's liable to cut his finger on a real issue.

The voters know something about how they want to vote on real issues. A lot of blab-blah-blah isn't so likely to win 'em.

Of course, if a candidate's dead sure how folks feel on a real issue, then he's safe in taking one side of it or the other—the majority side?—you know it—and it makes the best kind of an issue.

Happy the candidate who's dead certain! My, but he's independent! But generally he's at least a little bit doubtful. In that case, the correct technic is—a real issue ISN'T an issue. The candidate can't see it with a microscope.

And yet he has to have an issue. So he makes one.

It's synthetic, and such substitutes seldom are as satisfactory as the "genuine." The voters prove that they don't like 'em, by more and more of them staying away from the polls, on election day. How do they know, from a candidate's position on a make-believe issue, that doesn't interest 'em, what his position is on some real issue, that they'd like to settle?

Nevertheless, it's "two party" politics. And what are the voters going to do about it? Both sides follow the same method.

Thus we begin to see why the American professional politician is so wedded to what he calls the "two party system of government."

The two are so much alike that nobody can tell 'em apart—except here and there, an outstanding individual—and the professional can go on straddling indefinitely, so long as it stays only "two party."

But let a third party break in and it upsets all his calculations. At the thought of a lot of "blobs" he simply shudders. A third party begins to MEAN something. A bunch of "blobs" would mean EVERYTHING.

A "blob" signifies, supremely, some single principle. A manufacturers' bloc—a farm bloc—a labor bloc—a "white collar" bloc—a wet bloc—a dry bloc—a League of Nations bloc—a nationalistic bloc—each bloc representative of a concrete idea, that there'd be no dodging!

Such an aggregation could do business only by forming partnerships, certainly—but each time such a partnership was formed, it would be mighty noticeable that the blocs who formed it, HAD formed it.

There wouldn't be any hiding in the "party regularity" closet. It would amount to a referendum on every important question. That's why the professional politicians tell us that the "two party system of government" is such a glorious institution.

What Price Marriage?

What do most young people have in their minds when they stand before the marriage altar exchanging vows? Do they realize that they are solemnly making promises—before witnesses—to love, honor and cherish one another until "death do them part"? Or do they answer "I will" to that with the mental reservation that it will only be for as long as it suits them? Three letters coming to me, one after the other, make me feel that some people, at least, do not take their marriage vows very seriously.

Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a married woman and have two small children. A year ago my husband left me. As he did not return I kept company with a married man who has no children. Recently my husband returned. I am greatly undecided what to do. The man I like says he will secure a divorce if I divorce my husband. I am sure to be happy with him. Should I go back to my husband on account of our two little girls? Please advise, as I am in great trouble. I do not love my husband as I do this other man.

What about the other man's wife? Is she perfectly willing to let you have her husband? And why are you so sure that this man who isn't true to his wife, will treat you any better than did your husband? How do the children feel? Do they love their father, and does he love them? If your husband has come back with an appreciation of the home he left and a desire to do what is right, it seems to me you should try to give him a chance and forget the other man, who is not free to love you.

MISS PHOEBE RETURNS TO BIRD BOX ROW

"Johnny Wren! Johnny Wren! Do stop that singing—you have been at it the whole livelong day—and listen to me! I have a piece of news for you. Miss Phoebe Bird is home again and looking for an apartment for the spring.

"And, do you know, she is quite as conceited as ever. In spite of the fact that she hadn't seen me for all these months, do you think she would talk about anything but herself? Not she! I tried my best to find out what she had been doing all winter, whom she had seen and what she had heard. You can't tell that! And any lady bird with eyes as bright as hers hasn't seen a lot!

"But, do you think that she would say a word? No, siree! To everything I asked her all she would answer was 'Phoebe! Phoebe! Phoebe!'

"Wait a minute, Johnny, before you attack an old friend of yours. I am the boy who built your house. Aren't you going to let me visit you in your apartment? Come on, invite me up,

"I'D LOVE JUST AS YOU SAW ME, AND CAUGHT A MINNOW," KINGFISHER TOLD THE BOY.

"Of course, if Mrs. Wren is too busy with her work to receive callers, I will go away again, but I shall be so disappointed. I heard you two talking about Phoebe Bird, and I thought you could tell me all the late birdland news. The folks are most all back from their winter vacations, aren't they?"

Isn't Peter the lucky little boy to be able to talk with Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Wren? Once a long time ago, Peter saved the life of the Old Oak Tree and the Tree in gratitude gave Peter the magic power of speech with all the creatures of the field, air, forest, and jungle. He also carries the tail of a blue lizard in his pocket which keeps him from harm.

HELPING BUILD BOULDER DAM

Branding the Boulder Dam project, as proposed in the Swing-Johnson bill in Congress, as a "wide crack in the door for the entry of state socialism," the Ohio Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution against the government entering the power business, but favoring "such measures as may be wise and necessary for the control of floods."

"Ohio is willing to do its share cheerfully in any federal project economically sound and consistent with our traditions," but the resolution points out that:

"The directly benefited region pays about one per cent of the taxes of the United States government. Ohio alone pays six times the taxes of said region. Seven non-benefited states, namely, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, pay 69 per cent of the United States government taxes, or 69 times those of the benefited region."

The claim of proponents of the measure that Boulder Dam would furnish cheap electricity to Los Angeles and that proceeds from its sale would finance the undertaking, is exploded by Samuel S. Wiser, consulting engineer, who says:

"Generating current for nothing at Boulder Dam would make little difference in a Los Angeles electric consumer's bill." He shows that cost of generating electricity by falling water is only 12 per cent of domestic consumer's cost; transmission of power is 12 per cent; and distribution is 74 per cent of delivered power cost.

EDISON'S WARNING TO YOUTHS

"The boy of 20 who does not know what to do thereby confesses that he has been wasting his time. He is not interested in any particular work because he has not informed himself about any particular work."

Thomas A. Edison holds this opinion of that class of modern youths who reach manhood without either ambition or training to reach a specific goal in life.

Edison, who himself knew what he wanted to do at 15 and is still doing it with enthusiasm in his 82nd year, so expresses himself in an interview in McClure's.

"There is no excuse whatever for the failure of any young man of 20 to discover something that he would like to do," he declares. "The world is so filled with interesting things to do that the longest human life could not exhaust more than a small fraction of them."

"But to discover what these things are one must inform oneself about them. One must begin to fill one's mind with facts. The more imagination one has the more the facts will mean, the more one will become interested."

"But so many boys waste their time. They waste it because they lack the will to work. They want pleasure; most of them are mad about it. They want money, too, but when they think of that they look for short-cuts. They are not willing to do the hard work necessary to lay the foundations of real success."

The bitter fact, Edison points out, is that the youth who loves frothy pleasures too well is committing himself to a life of hard and distasteful work because he is untrained, while the one who trains himself when young will be able to enjoy the pleasures of later life. "The youth who has not chosen wisely and at 25 is not well on his way in a bad fix," he says.

An old song says that there's no place like home, but even if there was, you probably wouldn't find the young people there.

SO THAT'S THE REASON

If farmers didn't joy ride so much, if they worked harder and kept up and after their farms as they should they would all make a fair profit. Those are hard words but they come from T. F. Hopkins who owns a 2,000 acre wheat farm in Kansas. Says Hopkins:

"Every farmer who spends his time tending to his farm is making a go of it. Most of the unsuccessful ones buy automobiles on the installment plan before they get their crops harvested. Lack of success that these farmers have is due to laziness and shiftlessness."

It is probably true that the average farmer does not work as hard as the average city business man—but he often does a kind of work that the city business man couldn't or wouldn't do.

CHEWING GUM VALUES

There are lots of apparently trivial things in this world that have values, only most of us haven't found it out. A Chicago big game hunter, recently back from Africa, says his party took 70 pounds of chewing gum into the jungle.

"What it meant to us can't be estimated," he says. "We got along on half the water ordinarily needed—and good water is hard to get."

SELFISH MOODS

Our indulgence in moods is probably the most selfish thing we do. Just because we didn't sleep well or the toast was burned we cloud the whole atmosphere of our office or lower the pleasant temperature of optimism by our mood. And it is especially indefensible to inflict our tempers and temperaments on our friends.

It isn't your friend's fault that you have an ugly disposition. Is it fair to make him pay for it? Reasonable unselfishness demands that you keep your bad moods to yourself. If you can't do that, keep out of sight. Nobody wants you that way.

New Yorker

—By—

BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, March 22.

What sort of adults, I wonder, will spring from the present generation of children in New York? With no thought of discarding the Younger Generation, I am yet moved to such speculation by the following incident:

Two little girls, garbed in the eternal princess of infant clothing, ask a fellow passenger in a subway train, how they can go to a certain street uptown. He, a swarthy young man, obliges and one of the girls, who is about ten years old, thanks him politely. A moment later the fellow turned and explained that by changing to a different train, the children might reach their destination more quickly. He expanded on the topic.

The little girl who had first inquired regarded him both suspiciously and admiringly.

"No," she said, shortly, "we'll stay on this train, thank you." And she turned away haughtily, just as a grown woman might snub an impertinent stranger. The chilly look, coming from under the infant, chinchilla-trimmed bonnet, was nothing, if not grotesque.

Whether he knew it or not, the young man was under suspicion of entertaining evil designs on the children. Not for nothing does the modern child read the tabloids.

Just to bring our own directory of Greenwich Village up to date. A delicatessen cafeteria, on Sheridan square, is now the recognized gathering place for local talent. Tables are filled during late afternoon, and from 1 to 3 o'clock in the morning.

The proprietor, while recognizing the value of such a clientele, nevertheless keeps a sharp eye on the lookout for deadheads. The deadhead is one who occupies a chair and eats nothing. Waiters constantly circulate, and in no uncertain terms ask those who have no dish before them to move on. There are some villagers so talented as to make a ham sandwich last three hours.

On one occasion the proprietor, finding his place filled with deadheads, earnestly appealed to their better natures, piled up chairs on the tables, turned out the lights, and finally was forced to throw wide the doors and admit the chill winter air before he could persuade the assembled to leave.

One of the more audacious comedies of the season appeared the other evening when "The Bachelor Father," written by Edward Childs Carpenter and produced by David Belasco, came to town. Some of the lines were assigned by the ladies behind me as "gaspers" and as a consequence the piece is naturally slated for a successful run. If there is anything a Manhattan audience delights in, it is sheer audacity in the treatment of the dramatist's favorite topic, sex. What shocks, affronts and offends in a smaller and more conservative city is fondly accepted in New York. I don't mean to say that "The Bachelor Father" is a shocker. It just contains some bold and brazen lines.

WHEN FOLKS MARRY

One often hears a young man in his teens or early twenties boast that he will remain a bachelor. But, ah, how vain are such ambitions! The chances are one out of three, according to cold figures that he can't avoid marriage even after he is 25. In other words, of nine men single at 20, three are certain to wear the matrimonial yoke before five years have elapsed. The same is true of a young woman. But if a woman is still single at 25, the chances are less than one in five that she will marry before 30; the chances that a man will do so still remain better than one in four. Age has more effect on woman's marriage chances than on a man's. In a general way, every five years added to one's age, between 30 and 50, cuts one's marriage expectancy right in two.

More marriages are between persons without previous matrimonial experience; that is, bachelors and maids. These comprise eight out of ten of all marriages. The next largest group are widowers with maids, and then widowers with widows, each a little more than two marriages out of every 100. Then come the less likely combination: divorced men and widows—only a little more than one in 200 marriages; and divorced men with divorced women—less than one such marriage in 300. Twice as many divorced women marry bachelors as marry widowers. Indeed, in what-ever combination, widowers are always a little more cagey than bachelors.

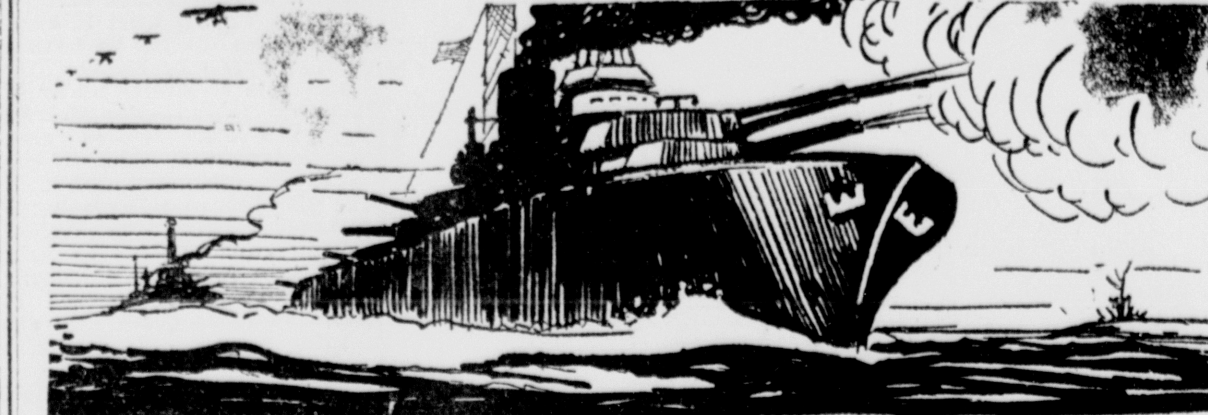

From one set of figures I learn that for every 100 weddings, 75 men are older than their brides, and 15 are younger. Of every hundred men married in one year—among a selected population of several hundred—26 were bachelors, 12 were widowers and two divorced. Of the 86 bachelors, 80 picked maids, five got widows and one a divorced woman. The 12 widowers married six maids, five widows, and one divorcee.

PRACTICAL HINTS ON BEAUTY DIETS

It has been definitely demonstrated by laboratory experiment, that life can actually be prolonged by proper food, if other contributory conditions are favorable to health and longevity. Personally, I have conducted, literally, hundreds of experiments with food in its relationship to a good complexion. I have proved to my own complete satisfaction the fact that good food, scientifically selected in correct proportions, will go a long way toward correcting certain skin conditions and will benefit all skin conditions.

Diet, of course, is immensely important in modifying or developing the body line. I think fully 40 per cent of we moderns select our menus in terms of calories—not at all a bad thing, provided all extremes are avoided.

I am only going to touch upon diet as a beauty aid, for the subject of dietetics is a field in itself. There are, however, certain dietetic laws which are directly in line with Beauty Building. Certain foods are definitely bad for the complexion, others are definitely good—and these are the rudiments of beauty diet.

Sweets and spices are taboo—to those wise women who value their smooth, clear skin. I have known a woman to "break out" one hour after nibbling at pickles. Spices are heating to the blood. There are very few women who can escape the speedy bad effect of indulging in them. Sweets have the same effect. Personally, I can never drink chocolate or cocoa without knowing that my mirror will rebuke me on the morrow!

Orange juice is a blood purifier and a skin clearer. Milk is renowned, and has been for centuries, as a beauty-diet. Leafy vegetables help you to beauty through clean intestines and pure, active circulation. Vegetable liquors are wonderful. An entire day, every month dedicated to a vegetable diet with the vegetable liquors and plenty of clear water will do marvellous things for your health and your beauty.

Celery and apples have definite effects on the kidneys, and the condition of your kidneys will affect the color of your skin. Greasy, yellowish discolored and sallow faces are danger signals! Beets are wonderful for the blood—important to the diet of anemia victims and helpful to all women in bringing natural glow and color to lips and cheeks. All fruit is splendid. An apple a day will not only keep the doctor away, but (especially if you add an orange to the fruit quota) it will also help to give you the charm of a white, clear, healthy skin.

For acne and blackheads, both significant of intestinal disorders, the strictest fruit liquid and vegetable diet should be observed. You see, you cannot only eat your way to health, but to beauty too!

A CENTRAL REGULATOR OF NUTRITION

In an article in a French magazine, Dr. G. Leven tries to prove that there is a regulator of weight or nutrition connected with the nervous system, and that in underweight or in obesity this regulator is disordered. He says that he has frequently tried to cause a gain in weight in healthy men by having them overeat and take insufficient exercise, but he was not able to do so. He acknowledges that the duration of the experiments was but from 15 to 30 days, because, he says, the over-alimentation produced constipation and gastric disorders. He goes on to give a number of cases which he thinks illustrate his theory of abnormal functioning of this weight regulator. Here are a few of them:

Case 1. A young mother foolishly overate and drank beer with the idea of increasing the quality of her milk. She became very obese. Her pregnancy had thrown her organism into disequilibrium.

Case 2. A man of 47 weighed 352 pounds. He always had a tendency to obesity. He has an ordinary appetite and drinks considerable wine.

Case 3. A woman 33 years of age, always been dyspeptic, but her heart, lungs and other organs were normal. She fell down and injured herself. From then on she began to gain weight and gained 60 pounds in

Possibly these figures prove something of importance, but I am not certain just what it is,

"But, do you think that she would say a word? No, siree! To everything I asked her all she would answer was 'Phoebe! Phoebe! Phoebe!'"

Peter looked about to find out who the indignant speaker was. He was standing right beneath Mr. and Mrs. Wren's apartment in Bird Box Row, and there, peeping out of her open doorway, was Jenny Wren herself and she was talking to her fat little husband, who sat merrily singing on the porch of his home in the treetop.

"But, my dear, perhaps Miss Phoebe Bird really didn't have anything to tell. To be sure, her eyes are bright, but did you ever hear that she used them to look for anything but flies or bugs? I never have, and I have known the lady for a long time. To be sure, she belongs to the Flycatcher family, and takes her food upon the wing. Between you and me, I don't believe that she thinks of much else. Anyway, don't worry your little head about it. Haven't you enough to think about, with all your household duties?"

"Now, isn't that just like a male!" Jenny Wren flitted about, angrily. "Talking about my household duties, when all you do is sit out here and sing! sing! sing! And there you go again! You are singing now. Stop it! Stop it, I say! Good gracious! Who is that at our front door? A two-legs, or I am much mistaken."

Her last words brought sudden silence. Johnny Wren sudfled up until he was twice as fat as he had been before, and was about to rush at the stranger, but the boy— for it was Peter who had climbed the tree and now hung to the porch—called out:

"Wait a minute, Johnny, before you attack an old friend of yours. I am the boy who built your house. Aren't you going to let me visit you in your apartment? Come on, invite me up, let me see your new place."

"I DOVE DOWN JUST AS YOU SAW ME, AND CATCHED A MINNOW," KINGFISHER TOLD THE BOY.

It is awfully uncomfortable hanging on to the edge of your porch.

"Of course, if Mrs. Wren is too busy with her work to receive callers, I will go away again, but I shall be so disappointed. I heard you talking about Phoebe Bird, and I thought you could tell me all the late birdland news. The folks are most all back from their winter vacations, aren't they?"

Isn't Peter the lucky little boy to be able to talk with Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Wren? Once a long time ago, Peter saved the life of the Old Oak Tree and the Tree in gratitude gave Peter the magic power of speech with all the creatures of the field, air, forest, and jungle. He also carries the tail and keeps him from harm.

Next—"Johnny Wren's Apartment."

PIRATES OPTIMISTIC WITH OLD WEAKNESSES NOW CORRECTED

(Editor's Note:—This is the twelfth of a series of articles by the International News Service, dealing with developments in various major league training camps. Other articles of the series will follow.)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—Pretty much pre-determined in personnel before ever the club left Pittsburgh for its spring conditioning at Paso Robles, the champion Pirates, are a natural stand-out in National League company. Even the four successive defeats they suffered at the Yankees' hands in the world series and the five straight reverses their own fans handed them this spring have failed to dissipate the impression that Donie Bush's club will run no worse than one-two at the end of the season.

Barring Kiki Cuyler, who sat out the bench for most of the 1927 season, the Pirates lost nothing from their championship club and it gained considerable strength on the right sight of the infield through the acquisition of "Sparky" Adams from the Cubs.

That statement just about tells the story of the 1928 Pirates. Their only real weakness last year was at first and second bases, Joe Harris having slowed up and George Grantham being an indifferent key-stoner. With Adams on second, Grantham has been sent to first base, where he is much more effective in defense.

The rest of the club is pretty much as it was when the last play of the world series was over. It considers that it pulled a fast one in getting Burrell Grimes from the Giants for Vic Aldridge but otherwise the pitching staff is unchanged. Its regulars in addition to Grimes are Carmen Hill and Leo Meadows, the bi-focal twins; Ray Kremer, due for a better year if he can escape further injuries, and John Miljus, the Californian who helped pitch the club into the pennant late last year.

The staunch left side of the Pirates' infield, represented by Glen Wright, Pie Traynor and Earl Smith, is back to do the catching. This means that they are satisfactory to Bush, although some critics feel that this position represents a possible weakness.

That outfield, now that Cuyler has gone his unlamented way, also is a pre-determined affair, at least in two positions. They are those occupied by the Waners, Paul and Lloyd. For the other spot, Clyde Barnhardt, 1927 regular, is having a merry battle with Adam Comorosky, back again from Wichita and Swyersville, Pa.

Radio Revue

NEW YORK, March 21.—Who really is the "father of radio"? The title has been applied to several persons, most frequently to Guglielmo Marconi.

Digging into electric history, one finds that possibly the honors may belong to James Clerk Maxwell, of the University of Edinburgh, who in 1867 outlined theoretically and predicted the action of etherial waves. He identified radio. Possibly one or more predecessors died as much, but Maxwell is first in the records.

Centuries ago it may have been discovered that there was such a potential action in the ether which envelopes the earth as an invisible, odorless, tasteless substance, for radio waves, as is well known, pass through every material thing on earth. They go in and out of the body carrying dot and dashes, speeches, music and pictures, yet they do not disturb the human system in the least. They pulsate through mountains, and can even hide in the vacuum of an incandescent lamp.

The speed of radio waves has been measured and a message can slip around the earth seven and one-half times in the batting of an eye, because the waves travel at the speed of sunlight. Radio transmits more easily over water than over land, because there are so many electric wires, masses of minerals, and other objects which impede the flight and absorb energy on terra firma. Radio also transmits better at night, because rays of the sun sap about 70 per cent of a radio wave's strength.

Despite all this power, radio was unknown and undiscovered until man found that such a medium as the ether existed. Maxwell, the aforementioned Scot, seems to have been the first to suspect the possibilities.

Marconi was the first man to harness the etherial waves successfully, but the possibility had already been pointed out to him by several noted physicists, Sir William Preece, Sir Oliver Lodge and Professor Augusto Righi whose student he was. He made his first set of instruments in 1894. In 1896 he conducted his first successful public experiment across a span of two miles, at Salisbury Plain, England.

Dunlap points out that Edison nearly discovered the big secret of radio when, on November 22, 1875, he observed a peculiar scintillating spark in one of his experiments with an electric magnet, and after study he proposed the name, "etheric force" for the phenomenon. He tested in various ways to discover that the new current refused to obey any of the established laws of electricity, except that of traversing metallic conductors. A lack of polarity was observed as one of its peculiarities. Edison did not pursue his investigation much further.

A SUBWAY STUNT
NEW YORK CITY.—A youth entered the platform of the Twenty-eighth Street subway station. He removed his coat, folded it carefully and placed it on a bench. Next his shirt came off and then his shoes. Then he stretched himself out on the bench, curled up and passed into dreamless slumber. Patrolman Ernest Smith arrived on the scene. Gently he approached the sleeper and suggested that he go home to finish his sleep. "What do you mean pulling me out of bed? Such outrage! I'll show you," and with one big blow he hit the policeman in the eye. "I'll call the police," he added. "I'll help you," said Smith, gently, as he dragged the youth to jail.

DOG BEATER GETS BEATING
LOS ANGELES.—As Miss Yvonne Euler strolled along she heard the persistent wails of a dog. Rushing forth, she encountered a man beating a puppy. Miss Euler's anger rose. She armed herself with a stout club that lay nearby, and without hesitation started to beat the man furiously. "Let that dog alone or I'll kill you," she cried. The man quit beating the dog and dashed away. Miss Euler has the dog. She also has the club.

Goggles on Job
The service at Mt. Zion Church was well attended, Sunday morning. The K. of P. Lodge of Alpha was in attendance. Rev. Leeming gave a fine sermon. He took for his text "Am I My Brother's Keeper?"

The pre-Easter service will be held at Mt. Zion Church, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, April 3 and 4. At Beaver Reformed Church Thursday and Friday evening, April 5 and 6. Rev. Messrs. Hartman, Edmiller and Hister will help with the services.

Mrs. Pape of Dayton is reported much improved in health. The Ladies Aid Society is ready to receive the Coin Cards. A request is made to return the card to the person from which it was received. Those that have sent their cards in are Mrs. Mary Pape, Miss Louise Pape, Mrs. Jane Stine, Mr. and Mrs. William Graham, Mrs. Mary Heath and Mrs. Jennie Custerborer.

The Girls Guild of Mt. Zion will meet at the home of Miss Irene Stafford, Wednesday evening, March 21.

The many friends of Mrs. Sarah Kable and son, Oscar of Shoup's Station gave them a surprise Wednesday March 14. Mrs. Kable's birthday was March 13 and Oscar's the 15th. They all came with well filled baskets and all spent a very happy day together. Those present were: Mrs. Rebecca Lafong, Mr. and Mrs. Forest Shoup and daughter Catherine, Mrs. Jennie Kable, Mrs. Peters, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. B. D. Merrick of Dayton, Mr. and Mrs. Hower Cosler, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Smith and Mrs. Ruth Weiss of Xenia, Misses Emma, Katie and Martha Merrick, Mrs. J. S. Merrick, Mrs. D. O. ### SPRING TIME IS BUILDING TIME

Springtime has always been building time! Deep in the heart of all mankind nature has planted the urge to build. From the time when primitive man came out from the dark cave that had sheltered his family during the winter months and exultantly started to prepare a shelter above ground to house them during the warmer seasons, from that remote age to this Spring of 1928, the coming of Spring has brought with it the fine desire to build a home. The quality of this annual home building has marked the footsteps of the development of the race. Each recurring season has brought a wider and deeper appreciation of what home building should mean, and, as homes have grown more complete and beautiful, so civilization has advanced and improved.

The Spring of 1928 will see the building of more new homes in Xenia and Greene County, and Xenia builders---from the architects who draw the plans to the carpenters who put the finishing touches to the completed structure---are able to give to home builders better values and more complete service than ever before. Not only are the local contractors and dealers able to supply the newest and best in materials and finishings, but they can give the people of Greene County better values for less money than could be secured anywhere else. In considering your plans for the building this Spring remember that local dealers are not only prepared to meet your needs but that they take a personal pride in making a city of beautiful, well-built homes, and will give you the best, both in material and service, that is possible to secure.

It is all paint.

Next to quality, and of almost equal importance, is how to use this product in order to obtain the most satisfactory results. Devote realizes the importance of this question and has taken the necessary steps to assist you.

Sage Tea Dandy to Darken Hair

By DOROTHY LANG

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. It costs only 75 cents. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days. Adv.

GRETNA GREENS ARE CATERING TO CUPID

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 21.—The rise and fall of Gretna Greens in the tri-state district about Pittsburgh is noted here today in a check-up of the towns that have had or are now enjoying popularity with victims of Cupid's darts who enjoy the thrill of going to a strange community to be married.

West Alexander, Pa., a tiny town on the National Road between Wheeling and Washington just over the West Virginia line in Pennsylvania, was the first in the district to enjoy business of this nature in unprecedented volume. Then Steubenville became the rallying point for lovers. That town lost its popularity when Ohio began placing restrictions on persons who would wed, requiring the bride to be a resident of the county in which the license was issued and later that she must be old enough to vote. West Virginia then began receiving the visits of the lovers. Now Cumberland in Hancock County being in favor for a while. Finally, the center of the marriage business shifted to Wellsburg in Brooke County and there the laurals rest, that county issuing more licenses than any other in West Virginia. Pittsburgh pairs predominate in the lists of successful applicants.

SMART FURNITURE AND DRAPERIES AT GALLOWAY-CHERRY

Just what kind of furniture and hangings are necessary to make the proper appearance for a home is exemplified in the stock carried by Galloway and Cherry, W. Main St.

The highest type of workmanship and handcraft have gone into the making of the house furnishings carried by this store. The drapery department is given particular attention, and the perfect selection of material and design is given heed as it is in other lines of stock.

The Galloway and Cherry store has stressed the importance of correct hangings in the home and has catered to the finest taste of its clientele in selecting its stock. With the arrival of spring, the need of new drapes and other house furnishings is particularly noted and a visit to the Galloway and Cherry Store will meet with satisfaction.

Old Egypt Honored The Dead

Far within the outer walls of the pyramids are hermetically sealed chambers. Here the emperors of early Egypt prepared for themselves their abode after death. Here they placed the Book of the Dead—a guide for the re-incarnated spirit in its after-life wanderings. Mural paintings—life sized statues—works of art—adorned these chambers.

Your Reverence

For your beloved dead demands expression in the erection of an enduring memorial. It is the last tribute you may pay to those who have gone before—the last personal service you may render. To erect a monument that is beautiful in quality, line and workmanship is to dignify the memory of your loved ones.

As designers and experts in memorial craftsmanship we can ably assist you.

BABBS SELL FAMED DEVOE PAINT HERE FOR SPRING NEEDS

After all is said and done, the thing that interests you most about a paint or varnish product is its quality.

Devoe lead and zinc paint, handled exclusively in this city by Babb's Hardware Store, 16 S. Detroit St., guarantees satisfaction. This firm has handled the product for the last six years and a steady increase is noted each year in the number of users.

White lead and white zinc in linseed oil are the only two pigments used in this paint, giving a greater body or covering capacity. The paint is made of 50 per cent pure white lead (carbonate of lead); 50 per cent pure white zinc (oxide of zinc); pure tinting colors, pure linseed oil, pure turpentine dryer AND NOTHING ELSE. It is all paint.

Next to quality, and of almost equal importance, is how to use this product in order to obtain the most satisfactory results. Devoe realizes the importance of this question and has taken the necessary steps to assist you.

Sage Tea Dandy to Darken Hair

By DOROTHY LANG

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. It costs only 75 cents. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days. Adv.

GRETNNA GREENS ARE CATERING TO CUPID

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 21.—The rise and fall of Gretna Greens in the tri-state district about Pittsburgh is noted here today in a check-up of the towns that have had or are now enjoying popularity with victims of Cupid's darts who enjoy the thrill of going to a strange community to be married.

West Alexander, Pa., a tiny town on the National Road between Wheeling and Washington, just over the West Virginia line in Pennsylvania, was the first in the district to enjoy business of this nature. In unprecedented volume. Then Steubenville became the rallying point for lovers. That town lost its popularity when Ohio began placing restrictions on persons who would wed, requiring the bride to be a resident of the county in which the license was issued and later that she must be old enough to vote. West Virginia then began receiving the visits of the lovelorn. New Cumberland in Hancock County being in favor for a while. Finally, the center of the marriage business shifted to Wellsburg in Brooke County and there the laurels rest, that county issuing more licenses than any other in West Virginia. Pittsburgh pairs predominate in the lists of successful applicants.

Great Catholic Church at Tagumare, Transylvania, according to word from Bucharest today. The clashes took place during a demonstration against the religious regulations.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils
Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! How good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hacking, sniffling, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overindulgence, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overindulgent do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils
Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! How good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

TOM LONG PROVES HUSTLING REALTOR SHOULD ADVERTISE

When any one says "Tom Long," your mind involuntarily supplies the remainder of the phrase, "the real estate man."

In order to link his name and his business inseparably in people's minds a man has to be alive and hustling and keeping his business always foremost in the public eye. This is what Mr. Long does. The importance of many of the business deals swung by him have been his most effective advertisements, combined with the power of the printed page because Mr. Long is a firm believer in the value of consistent newspaper advertising.

The many pieces of desirable city and town properties found on his lists bespeak the confidence which he enjoys from the people of this locality. He is waiting eagerly for the coming of warmer spring weather to usher in a busy season in real estate.

HENRIE TIN SHOP KEEPING BUSY AS PROOF OF SUCCESS

Any shop that is constantly working up to full capacity is one that is sure to be giving the people of the community satisfactory service.

"For the last year there has been no slack season. We have been busy every day," said Mrs. C. L. Henrie, who has so successfully managed the business for the last few years.

This shop gives complete service including metal roofing, spouting, gutters and all kinds of metal work, furnace installing and every line of work handled by the modern tin shop.

With the coming of spring thunder showers, Mrs. Henrie is taking special interest in lightning rods and has especially fine protection to offer against the hazard of lightning.

LIMERICKS AMUSE KIWANIS MEMBERS

Instead of confining his talk to Irish conditions, R. O. Wead, county auditor, amused the Kiwanis Club, with limericks regarding each member, at the Elks' Club Tuesday evening. The talk furnished much merriment.

Mrs. W. H. Tifford sang two Irish ballads, as part of the St. Patrick's program. James Paulin won the "St. Patrick's" tie the attendance prize.

Announcement was made that reserved seats for the address of Prof. F. D. Slutz, Dayton, under auspices of the club, will be on sale at Sohn's Drug Store Thursday noon.

Lieut. H. E. Rice, Jr., of the U. S. Navy, was a guest of his father at the meeting.

LUMBERTON

Revival services will begin at the church here Sunday March 25 and continue throughout the next week. Everybody is cordially invited to attend the meetings.

The funeral of Mrs. Orville Colvin held at the church Friday afternoon was largely attended. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Several from this place attended the opera at Mt. Pleasant Friday night.

The small pox patients have all recovered and are able to be back in school once more.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Hansell spent Sunday in Xenia the guests of Mrs. Myrtle Routzong and children.

Mrs. Clem Conklin and daughter Regus spent the week end in Xenia with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Genger.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Nichols and little daughter spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Southern of Berryville.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Anderson of near Wilmington were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wolford.

STOUT COMPANY HAS WELL EQUIPPED AND WELL STOCKED YARD

The most modern and the finest equipped coal yard in the city—this claim of the Stout Coal Co., is borne out by an inspection of the company's coal yard on Home Ave. The railroad and storage facilities equal the larger yards in big cities and everything is arranged to give patrons the quickest and best service.

Not only is the service of the best but the quality of coal sold here has brought this firm an enviable position among the coal dealers of the city. The Stout Block coal of which the firm makes a specialty, has proved its merit to hundreds of Greene County users. The general courtesy with which all patrons are greeted, has gone far toward making this firm one of the most popular and successful in the county.

MOCK CONVENTION

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Active and potential candidates for the presidency in the 1928 campaign will get an inkling of their fate at a mock national convention to be staged here April 17 by Ohio State University students. Similar mock conventions have been held here in other presidential election years. In contrast to the quadrennial shows of the Republican and Democratic parties, however, the campus convention will be non-partisan. It will have 600 delegates and will be held in the gymnasium. To give the event an extra note of realism, a speaker of national reputation is being sought to give the keynote speech.

"Who is She?"

You simply can't keep people from wanting to know who you are when you're as sparkingly fresh and crisply beautiful as dainty Georgette Vorel, lovely New York City girl who lives at 782 Carroll St., Brooklyn. Everyone admires her lovely figure, and her marvelously clear, rose-tinted complexion, but women marvel most at the softness and lustre of her hair.

"I am so busy that I have almost no time to give to my hair," says Miss Vorel, "and I really don't know what I should do about it, if I hadn't learned how so many of my girl friends here in New York are taking care of theirs."

"It's so simple. All you do is put a few dashes of Danderine on your brush each time you use it. This wonderful preparation keeps my hair so soft and lustrous that many friends have commented on it. It makes my scalp feel just grand and all dandruff disappeared with the first few applications. It keeps my hair so clean that I don't have to shampoo nearly so often as I used to."

Danderine isn't oily and doesn't show. It makes hair easy to dress and holds it in place. All drug stores have the 35c bottles. Lovely hair and a healthy scalp for a few cents. Adv.

RENEW CORN BORER BATTLE

Frank N. Wallace, Indiana entomologist, who is leading his state's fight against the corn borer. Inset shows corn borers in a stalk.

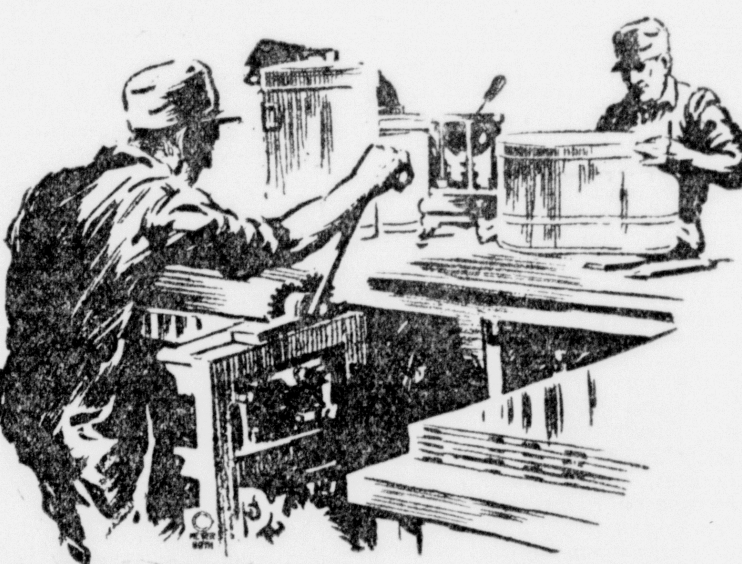

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette
INDIANAPOLIS Ind., March 21.—A tiny worm with a $20,000,000 appetite has goaded Uncle Sam into a declaration of war and thousands of corn belt farmers almost into distraction.

European corn borer—that's the name of the miscreant—has already cost some $10,000,000 in appropriations and may cost a similar sum in addition before he has been effectively beaten.

The borer came into the United States from Canada at the Lake Erie region, and ever since has been eating his way steadily south. Unless he is stopped, complete destruction of 100,000,000 acres of corn, at a cost of $2,000,000,000, is threatened.

The corn borer is a little fellow—he'd be just an appetizer for a hungry English sparrow. But he's the toughest and hardest-boiled roughneck who ever annoyed Uncle Sam into a declaration of war.

The borer, apparently, has more lives than a back-alley tom cat. The worm has been found embedded in ice, and as soon as the sun came out, wriggled back to life, discomfort to follow. Adv.

borer by pinching him between forefinger and thumb. His hide is as tough as whang-leather, but not nearly so useful.

One can't even drown the pest, because he is an excellent swimmer. He rides down rivers on infested corn stalks, and when they touch shore, hops off to continue his depredations.

The corn borer is also a clubby fellow. He likes to gang around. As many as forty-two of his kind have been found frolicking about in a single ear of corn.

Though a low-brow in his methods, the borer has elegant tastes, preferring juicy, green corn above all other food, though he'll eat any other plant rather than starve. He just imbeds himself in a stalk and eats away—and what an appetite!

Left to himself, the borer would destroy our entire corn crop in a single summer, and then the next year he would start in on our vegetables and flower gardens. After they were gone he would probably starve to death, but by that time every farmer would be bankrupt.

At present the battle against the borer centers in Indiana, where 160 tractors have been mobilized to plow corn fields and turn under all stalks, trash and stubble. This, it has been found, will control the corn borer and, if carried on a great-enough scale, will effectually stop his progress.

Incidentally, such plowing also counteracts against other pests, such as white grubs, wire worms, and certain fungus diseases, which have annually cost our farmers great sums. So, in a measure, the borer has proved a blessing—he has made necessary better and cleaner farming.

Congress last year appropriated $10,000,000 to fight the borer, and this year a similar sum has been asked.

That's a lot of money—but then, you know, there are a lot of corn borers.

borer by pinching him between forefinger and thumb. His hide is as tough as whang-leather, but not nearly so useful.

One can't even drown the pest, because he is an excellent sailor. He rides down rivers on infested corn stalks, and when they touch shore, hops off to continue his depredations.

The corn borer is also a clubby fellow. He likes to gang around. As many as forty-two of his kind have been found frolicking about in a single ear of corn.

Though a low-brow in his methods, the borer has elegant tastes, preferring juicy, green corn above all other food, though he'll eat any other plant rather than starve. He just imbeds himself in a stalk and eats away—and what an appetite!

Left to himself, the borer would destroy our entire corn crop in a single summer, and then the next year he would start in on our vegetables and flower gardens. After they were gone he would probably starve to death, but by that time every farmer would be bankrupt.

Center of Battle

At present the battle against the borer centers in Indiana, where 100 tractors have been mobilized to plow corn fields and turn under all stalks, trash and stubble. This, it has been found, will control the corn borer and, if carried on a great enough scale, will effectually stop his progress.

Incidentally, such plowing also counteracts against other pests, such as white grubs, wire worms, and certain fungus diseases, which have annually cost our farmers great sums. So, in a measure, the borer has proved a blessing—he has made necessary better and cleaner farming.

Congress last year appropriated $10,000,000 to fight the borer, and this year a similar sum has been asked.

That's a lot of money—but then, you know, there are a lot of corn borers.

RICHMOND, Va., March 21.—John Wesley Faison, former secretary of the Hermitage Country Club, will serve one year in prison for his part in the triangle-tragedy that resulted in the death of his sweetheart, Mrs. Elsie Holt Snipes, pretty divorcee.

A jury in Hastings court found Faison guilty of voluntary manslaughter last night at the conclusion of his second trial on charges of killing the woman. His first trial resulted in a disagreement. Faison contended Mrs. Snipes killed herself after he had informed her that he was "going back" to his wife and five children.

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $95,000 FOLLOWING EARLY MORNING FIRE

the return of a truck from Cincinnati about 1:45 a. m. Cramer had gone home about an hour before.

A sound sleeper, Steel was not awakened by the crackling of the flames in the factory part of the building on the first floor. A partition separates the office from the factory.

"Peggy," barked from the opposite side of the partition and when this failed to rouse Steel, the dog leaped through an open window and pawed Steel until he awoke.

Steel frantically attempted to phone the fire department and then, becoming excited, rushed out of the building and turned in the alarm from a fire box on Hill St.

Meanwhile the flames rapidly enveloped the building, spreading rapidly from the first floor to the upper stories because of a draft resulting from a number of holes cut in the floor. A car load of chick feed on the third floor was part of the loss sustained.

Steel attempted to re-enter the office to save the company's records and papers, but was prevented by Hall Hill, a neighbor, who considered it too dangerous. Steele also personally lost $30 in cash, which was in his clothes in the office.

Because of the great headway gained by the flames, firemen were unable to get the blaze under control until 4 o'clock. Three walls collapsed leaving only the east wall standing.

DOG WAS BURNED
The police dog, after having been responsible for discovery of the fire, disappeared during the excitement but returned early Wednesday morning and tried to climb over the smoldering ruins, according to Cramer. The dog was slightly burned.

FIREMAN HURT
Carl Cope, a special fireman, was knocked unconscious by a falling wooden beam while standing inside the door of the Eavey warehouse fighting the spreading flames. He was revived in a few minutes and continued on duty.

His injury was not serious. Five Chief William Harbison, narrowly escaped death or serious injury when they emerged from the warehouse only a few seconds before a portion of the roof caved in.

Firemen laid three lines of hose in pouring water on the three buildings and concentrated their efforts in saving the two adjacent structures.

Explosion of an incubator operated by coal oil is believed to have been responsible for the blaze, which is thought to have originated on the first floor.

BUILT IN 1912
The building was built in 1912 by the old Eavey Packing Co. It was later sold at sheriff's sale to John M. Davidson, who later disposed of his interest to the Miami Cereal Co., a firm which organized but never operated in the building. It was leased to the now defunct Strawn Press Co. and later subleased several times before the ownership was purchased by Belden in 1923.

It had been conducted by Cramer and Steel as the Xenia Hatcheries Co., handling poultry supplies, baby chicks and feed, for the last two years.

Belden announced Wednesday that the two-story frame building, which was partly damaged, would be repaired, but that he is undecided whether another building will be rebuilt on the site of the one destroyed. Cramer declared that arrangements would be made to establish temporary headquarters for the company at once in order to fulfill advance orders if possible.

The blaze, one of the most spectacular in the city's history, illuminated the sky for miles around and attracted many people to the scene despite the early hour and the cold weather.

TERRIBLE STORY OF SUBMARINE DOOMED REVEALED BY PROBE

At this address lives Pelmar's mother, Mrs. Kate Mieziva.

Briefly, this is the terrible story of the fate of the men of submarine S-4:

As the ship was rammed to the bottom, water entered the battery room slowly. The torpedo room and control room watertight doors were closed.

Officers started the pumps working, in an effort to clear the battery room.

The water continued to rise in the battery room, entered the batteries and generated chlorine gas. A pipe, used for an exhaust when the ship is submerged, collapsed between the battery room and the control room where had gathered thirty-four men.

Water began to enter the control room through a valve, the men in the control room tried to stop the valve but an American flag and the piece of green curtain was pushed by the water from the battery room side of the valve, clogging it and finally the valve burst.

As the sea water ran into the control room blinding flashes and sizzling insulation flared up from the switchboard.

The crew was forced to retreat to the engine room and every effort was made to prevent the seepage of water from the control room to the engine room.

Next to the engine room is the storeroom where are kept the supplies.

The entombed men had dragged raw potatoes, raw onions, and cans of sardines from the storeroom. These they ate to keep alive.

A bale of rags, used in cleaning the machinery, was found in the storeroom and was used by the men to cover themselves to keep warm.

Like Lieutenant Graham Newell Fitch and his five men in the torpedo compartment, the men in the storeroom hammered out signals on the steel walls, but these signals never reached the surface.

The thirty-four men, perhaps, having against hope that they would be saved, lay in the darkened chamber for hours covered by rags, with their only food raw potatoes, raw onions and sardines.

Finally the water forced them to their feet.

It was cold and some of them collapsed. They were brought to their feet by their comrades. Time after time the men fell. Each time they rose to their feet. But finally the water reached up to their chests, and weakened, they dropped and were drowned.

Meanwhile the six remaining men in the torpedo compartment were listening to Lieutenant Fitch tap out his message with a socket wrench.

Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur, who had returned to Washington today after viewing the wreck, indicated while he was here that the submarine would again go in commission, repairs being made either at this yard or the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H.

The face into which he was staring was that of Nita Ravelle.

At sight of Jack Stuart and Tony Justin, the ruddy countenance of Francois Le Tarte went a dirty yellow, while his eyes took on a panicky look like the eyes of a cornered animal. Face to face with the man, Jack Stuart's pent-up feelings overcame him for the moment.

"You dirty cur!" he gritted, holding himself with difficulty. "What have you to say for yourself?"

But the professor had noticed the federal men, evidently recognized them as officers, and knew himself to be in no immediate danger of a personal attack. He assumed at once an air of injured dignity.

"I don't know what you mean, Jack Stuart," he asserted, with a fine show of righteous anger, "speaking to me in that manner!"

"Where's the woman you brought here?" asked Detective Burke point blank.

"I don't admit your right, sir, in asking me such a question," replied the professor, haughtily.

At this display of bravado, Jack Stuart felt himself slipping. What a pretentious fool the fellow was. Could he be such a fool as to think he had any chance of bluffing his way out of this? Before Burke had a chance to show the professor his authority, Jack again spoke.

"Where's my wife, Le Tarte?" He shot the question direct. There was no sense in beating about the bush, he told himself.

But the professor was prepared evidently, to meet all queries with straight denial.

"I don't know what you're talking about, Stuart," he said insolently. "If you've lost your wife it's not my fault."

"It seems to me a waste of time talking to this fellow!" spoke up the other federal man at this juncture. "I suggest we see the woman and get her statement!"

He placed a hand on Professor Le Tarte's shoulder.

"Bear in mind, young fellow, that we have a warrant for your arrest on a federal charge."

A quick red leaped into the dancing master's cheeks, and then faded, leaving them sallow again. He kept close to the officer's side as the five started toward the elevator. Suddenly he halted.

"I'd like to telephone my attorney, if I may," he said appealing to the government man. "I can use this phone here, indicating a nearby booth. The officer nodded, and Le Tarte stepped inside the inclosure.

"Poor girl," gasped Jack Stuart, a great pity surging up within him. "She's fainting. I must get help!"

Clasped tight in his arms, he carried the inert form up the alley to the hotel's side entrance. As he stepped inside he caught the sound of excited voices. The next moment he saw Tony running toward him, followed by the two federal men and the hotel manager.

"My God, Jack!" cried the boy, rather wildly. "You've made an awful—"

At that instant Jack Stuart felt the form in his arms stiffen, and then straighten up to a position enabling her to gaze at her feet. He looked at her—and gasped! The face into which he was staring was that of Nita Ravelle!

"Will you please let go of me!" she said, calmly, contemptuously. He let go, still staring at her.

"Oh, Jack!" broke out Tony again. "You almost killed Le Tarte!"

At that Nita Ravelle turned on him like a tigress.

"What have you done to Frank?" she cried. "Where is he?"

Then Burke

EARLY MORNING FIRE

the return of a truck from Cincinnati about 1:45 a. m. Cramer had gone home about an hour before.

A sound sleeper, Steel was not awakened by the crackling of the flames in the factory part of the building on the first floor. A partition separates the office from the factory.

"Peggy," barked from the opposite side of the partition and which she failed to rouse Steel, the dog leaped through an open window and pawed Steel until he awoke.

Steel frantically attempted to phone the fire department and then, becoming excited, rushed out of the building and turned in the alarm from a fire box on Hill St.

Meanwhile the flames rapidly enveloped the building, spreading rapidly from the first floor to the upper stories because of a draft resulting from a number of holes cut in the floor. A car load of chick feed on the third floor was part of the loss sustained.

Steel attempted to re-enter the office to save the company's records and papers, but was prevented by Hall Hill, a neighbor, who considered it too dangerous. Steele also personally lost $30 in cash, which was in his clothes in the office.

Because of the great headway gained by the flames, firemen were unable to get the blaze under control until 4 o'clock. Three walls collapsed leaving only the east wall standing.

DOG WAS BURNED
The police dog, after having been responsible for discovery of the fire, disappeared during the excitement but returned early Wednesday morning and tried to climb over the smoldering ruins, according to Cramer. The dog was slightly burned.

FIREMAN HURT
Carl Coppe, a special fireman, was knocked unconscious by a falling wooden beam while standing inside the door of the Eavey warehouse fighting the spreading flames. He was revived in a few minutes and continued on duty. His injury was not serious.

Fire Chief William Hanftan and William Quirk, extra firemen, narrowly escaped death or serious injury when they emerged from the warehouse only a few seconds before a portion of the roof caved in.

Firemen laid three lines of hose in pouring water on the three buildings and concentrated their efforts in saving the two adjacent structures.

Explosion of an incubator operated by coal oil is believed to have been responsible for the blaze, which is thought to have originated on the first floor.

BUILT IN 1912
The building was built in 1912 by the old Eavey Packing Co. It was later sold at sheriff's sale to John M. Davidson, who later disposed of his interest to the Miami Cereal Co., a firm which organized but never operated in the building. It was leased to the long-indefunct Straw Press Co. and later subleased several times before entering the ownership was purchased by Belden in 1923.

It had been conducted by Cramer and Steel as the White Hatcher Co., handling poultry supplies, baby chicks and feed for the last two years.

Belden announced Wednesday that the two-story frame building, which was partly damaged, would be repaired, but that he is undecided whether another building will be rebuilt on the site of the one destroyed. Cramer declared that arrangements would be made to establish temporary headquarters for the company at once in order to fulfill advance orders if possible.

The blaze, one of the most spectacular in the city's history, illuminated the sky for miles around and attracted many people to the scene despite the early hour and the cold weather.

At this address lives Peinar's mother, Mrs. Kate Mieziva. Briefly, this is the terrible story of the fate of the men of submarine S-4.

As the ship was rammed to the bottom, water entered the battery room slowly. The torpedo room and control room watertight doors were closed.

Officers started the pumps working in an effort to clear the battery room.

The water continued to rise in the battery room, entered the batteries and generated chlorine gas. A pipe, used for an exhaust when the ship is submerged, collapsed between the battery room and the control room where had gathered thirty-four men.

Water began to enter the control room through a valve, the men in the control room tried to stop the valve but an American flag and the piece of green curtain was pushed by the water from the battery room side of the valve, clogging it and finally the valve burst.

Next to the engine room was the control room blinding flashes and sizzling insulation flared up from the switchboard.

The crew was forced to retreat to the engine room and every effort was made to prevent the seepage of water from the control room to the engine room.

Water to the engine room is a 220 ft. room where are kept the supplies.

CHAPTER LIII

At sight of Jack Stuart and Tony Justis, the ruddy countenance of Francois Le Tarte went a dirty yellow, while his eyes took on a panicky look like the eyes of a cornered animal. Face to face with the man, Jack Stuart's pent-up feelings overcame him for the moment.

"You dirty cur!" he gritted, holding himself with difficulty. "What have you to say for yourself?"

But the professor had noticed the federal men, evidently recognized them as officers, and knew himself to be in no immediate danger of a personal attack. He assumed at once an air of injured dignity.

"I don't know what you mean, Jack Stuart," he asserted, with a fine show of righteous anger, "speaking to me in that manner!"

"Where's the woman you brought here?" asked Detective Burke point blank.

"I don't admit your right, sir, in asking me such a question!" replied the professor, haughtily.

At this display of bravado, Jack Stuart felt himself slipping. What a pretentious fool the fellow was. Could he be such a fool as to think he had any chance of bluffing his way out of this? Before Burke had a chance to show the professor his authority, Jack again spoke.

"Where's my wife, Le Tarte?" He shot the question direct. There was no sense in beating about the bush, he told himself.

But the professor was prepared evidently to meet all queries with straight denial.

"I don't know what you're talking about, Stuart," he said insolently. "If you've lost your wife it's not my fault!"

"It seems to me a waste of time talking to this fellow!" spoke up the other federal man at this juncture. "I suggest we see the woman and get her statement!"

He placed a hand on Professor Le Tarte's shoulder.

"Bear in mind, young fellow, that we have a warrant for your arrest on a federal charge."

A quick red leaped into the dancing master's cheeks, and then faded, leaving them sallow again. He kept close to the officer's side as the five started toward the elevator. Suddenly he halted.

"I'd like to telephone my attorney, if I may," he said appealing to the government man. "I can use this phone here, indicating a nearby booth. The officer nodded, and Le Tarte stepped inside the inclosure.

Jack Stuart, suspicious of the professor's every move, stepped over close to the booth. He heard Le Tarte call Room 330. Then:

"Beat it, girl," he heard him say, in a low, distinct tone. "Jack Stuart's here. Also Tony Justis. They've got two dicks from federal office. On way up now. Duck quick down the fire escape! Hurry!"

Jack had started at the first words of Le Tarte to call out to Burke. Then it occurred to him to wait. The wait was fortunate, as it transpired. As Le Tarte hung up the receiver Jack moved quickly over to Burke's side.

"He was talking to her in Room 330," he swiftly informed the federal man. "Told her I was here with officers and for her to get away down the fire escape. How'd it be if you three went up with him to the room, while I intercept her at the fire escape?"

Burke nodded. "Go ahead," he said.

Stuart strode across to the desk and spoke to the clerk.

"Where is the fire escape connecting Room 330 located—on what side of the building?" he asked.

"On Fifth Street, near the alley," the clerk told him.

At that moment the professor emerged from the booth, noted the distance between himself and the two officers, and made a sudden dash for the stairway. Stuart saw the man's plan and ran to intercept him. He reached the foot of the stairs first, by a split second, saw Le Tarte's right hand reach for his hip pocket and leaped toward him, with a jawbreaking right uppercut. His fist caught the professor on the chin. Le Tarte pitched forward on his face.

There was no time to be lost. Jack knew, if he was going to do any good at that fire escape. To reach the spot by way of the street he would have to travel half a block on the main street, and the same distance on Fifth. He knew there must be a rear exit and started to locate it.

That spark which brings about the display of all human emotions in their varying range lies caged within the fragile shell of a violin or in the polished tomb of a piano.

Actors react to music just as a child reacts to a lollipop. Even the animals used in various pictures are affected by tunes. Dogs love the strains of a violin, and the cat, the most difficult target of the camera, purrs contentedly when a piano starts playing. The ponderous elephant has his musical eyes and dislikes. If the scenario writer has a keen calling for the star to weep, something must enter the star's soul that wounds her. Tears cannot always be commanded to flow by sheer power of will. Only recently has it been discovered how much all the nerves of the body respond in different ways to music.

BROWN FURNITURE GIVES ADDED TOUCH TO MAKE REAL HOME

"I would like to have nice furniture if I could only afford it."

The little touches that make a home a home are nice to have but they take money.

How often have you heard housewives make these remarks. The Brown Furniture Store, Green St. is managed with this knowledge in mind, and for that reason the financial worries of the householder are cut to the minimum by that store, through its easy credit system.

FRED GRAHAM SAYS PAINT CONTRIBUTES MUCH TO BUILDING

None of the many factors that go to make an attractive home or dwelling is more important than that of paint.

Paint of the right quality, color and shade is required for both the exterior and interior of a home. The stock of the Fred F. Graham Store meets these factors.

Whether you have a new home or are re-modelling an old one or brightening up your old house, the right paint for inside and out is required.

Paint is playing an important part, more than ever before, in the color scheme and arrangement of the interior. Ivory and white woodwork is the order of the day, and the glossy, spotless woodwork is what is noticed about your home.

MODERN ELECTRIC APPLIANCES FOUND AT MILLER'S SHOP

To fully appreciate the new and modern home there must be the electric appliances that make for less work and more happy hours.

There can be no happy home, where housework is drudgery and the old out-of-date appliances are used to carry on the work of one's home.

The Miller Electric Shop, W. Main St., has every electric appliance needed to make the heart of the householder happy and many a Green County woman has been gladdened by the electric assistance that she has obtained through appliances purchased at the Miller Shop.

The electric appliances needed in the modern home are a hundred fold and are all carried by the Miller Shop. From lighting fixtures to the curling iron, they are all there, and one is as necessary as the other to make the proper home environment.

No More Gas In Stomach and Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in stomach and bowels, take Baalman's Gas Tablets, which are prepared especially for stomach gas and all the bad effects resulting from gas pressure.

That empty, gnawing feeling at the pit of the stomach will disappear; that anxious, nervous feeling with heart palpitation will vanish, and you will again be able to take a deep breath without discomfort.

That drowsy, sleepy feeling after dinner will be replaced by a desire for entertainment. Bloating will cease. Your limbs, arms and fingers will no longer feel cold and "go to sleep" because Baalman's Gas Tablets prevent gas from interfering with the circulation. Get the genuine in the yellow package, at any good drug store. Price $1. Always on hand at SAYRE'S DRUG STORE.

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR HEALTH—IT'S PRECIOUS!

Woman, the finest work of the Creator—yet how often is she robbed of her natural attractiveness by ill health.

MINER BLASTS SELF TO DEATH

"You'll have to excuse me," wrote Mike Ferdei, Hungarian miner of McDowell county, West Virginia. Then he set off half a case of dynamite in the building shown in the photo, and was hurled through the wall to his death. Only bits of him were found. Ferdei was a soldier in the Hungarian army during the World war.

Farm Notes

DUST CUTS TOLL
Toll levied on the corn yield by seed-borne seedling blight organisms, can be materially reduced at a cost of five cents an acre. It has been announced by cereal pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Tests have resulted in increased yields of from one to twelve bushels an acre after treating the seed corn with chemical dust. The disinfectant was mixed with dry shelled seed corn at the rate of 2 ounces to the bushel. The dust is applied with a mixing machine of the type used in treating seed wheat for rust with copper carbonate. An ordinary barrel or oil drum mounted on an axis will serve, as will a barrel churn. The seed can be treated any time before planting, but should be stored in a safe place because the dust is poisonous.

Three dust disinfectants are commercially available at the present time. Others have been tested, however, and found effective. The names of the dusts and the firms through which they may be obtained, can be secured through Circular 34-C which may be had from the United States Department of Agriculture.

At the Illinois experiment station, where some of the tests were carried on, seed that was known to be diseased, yielded 4.5 bushels an acre when untreated, and 59.5 bushels an acre when treated. The gain was twelve bushels an acre. At the same station, seed that was pronounced good, made a yield of 63.2 bushels without treatment, and 65.1 bushels when treated. The tests showed both the advantage of using good seed when possible and the benefit derived from treating diseased seed when it must be used.

Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice

When physicians pronounce cascara the PERFECT laxative—why experiment with things that lash the system into action? Cascara, you know, is the bark of a tree. A natural and normal stimulus to the bowels.

The Indians, who used to chew this bark, had no word in their language that meant "constipation."

Perfect regularity is possible today, and to all of us. We have cascara in ideal form; the very delightful-tasting candy cascaret gives us pure cascara. It has helped at least a million people to habitual regularity. Millions of others, unfortunately, have stuck to stronger things and acquired only the laxative habit.

Your first cascaret will demonstrate how THOROUGH this gentle laxative is, after all. Your next surprise will be the length of time before you need another. Eventually, you'll see that cascaring tends to make the bowels move thereafter of their own accord!

A modern drugstore must stock many laxatives, but for your own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of cascarets than anything else.

MINER BLASTS SELF TO DEATH

"You'll have to excuse me," wrote Mike Ferdei, Hungarian miner of McDowell county, West Virginia. Then he set off half a case of dynamite in the building shown in the photo, and was hurled through the wall to his death. Only bits of him were found. Ferdei was a soldier in the Hungarian army during the World war.

Farm Notes

DUST CUTS TOLL
Toll levied on the corn yield by seed-borne seedling blight organisms, can be materially reduced at a cost of five cents an acre, it has been announced by cereal pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Tests have resulted in increased yields of from one to twelve bushels an acre after treating the seed corn with chemical dust. The disinfectant was mixed with dry shelled seed corn at the rate of 2 ounces to the bushel. The dust is applied with a mixing machine of the type used in treating seed wheat for rust with copper carbonate. An ordinary barrel or oil drum mounted on an axis will serve, as will a barrel churn. The seed can be treated any time before planting, but should be stored in a safe place because the dust is poisonous.
Three dust disinfectants are commercially available at the present time. Others have been tested, however, and found effective. The names of the dusts and the firms through which they may be obtained, can be secured through Circular 245 which may be had from the United States Department of Agriculture.
At the Illinois experiment station, where some of the tests were carried on, seed that was known to be diseased, yielded 47.5 bushels an acre when untreated, and 59.5 bushels an acre when treated. The gain was twelve bushels an acre. At the same station, seed that was pronounced good, made a yield of 63.2 bushels without treatment, and 65.1 bushels when treated. The tests showed both the advantage of using good seed when possible and the benefit derived from treating diseased seed when it must be used.

Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice

When physicians pronounce cascara the PERFECT laxative—why experiment with things that hash the system into action? Cascara, you know, is the bark of a tree. A natural and normal stimulus to the bowels.
The Indians, who used to chew this bark, had no word in their language that meant "constipation."
Perfect regularity is possible today, and to all of us. We have cascara in ideal form; the very delightful-tasting candy cascaret gives us pure cascara. It has helped at least a million people to habitual regularity. Millions of others, unfortunately, have stuck to stronger things and acquired only the laxative habit.
Your first cascaret will demonstrate how THOROUGH this gentle laxative is. After all, your next surprise will be the length of time before you need another. Eventually, you'll see that cascaring tends to make the bowels move thereafter of their own accord!
A modern drugstore must stock many laxatives, but for your own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of cascarets than anything else. Adv.
